BAD TO THE BONES

No subsidy for LRT, TTC chair says

Parties agreed in principle on one-fare system. 'Whatever the TTC's prevailing fare is in 2020, that will be the fare the customer pays,' Metrolinx VP says

Quoted

"In the original model, we would operate the line. So anything we didn't spend on buses we would contribute to the Crosstown. The same applied to Finch and Sheppard and (the conversion to light rail of) the Scarborough RT. But if we're not operating those lines, we're not paying those costs." TTC chair Karen Stintz

Don't expect Toronto taxpayers to subsidize privately operated transit lines, TTC chair Karen Stintz has warned the province.

A day after the TTC got word that Metrolinx has decided to privatize the operation and maintenance of its new $8.4 billion LRTs in Toronto, Stintz took a hard line on the TTC's contribution to their operating costs.

"If we're not operating those lines, we're not paying those costs.... I don't know where they're going to get the money," she said.

Stintz was responding to a suggestion from Ontario Infrastructure and Transportation Minister Bob Chiarelli that Metrolinx and the TTC are still negotiating an operating subsidy for the new LRTs.

Like any public transit line they're not expected to cover their operating costs from the fare box.

"Every transit system in North America has some government subsidies to cover off the operating. That's not unusual," he said.

"But the Eglinton-Crosstown will save the TTC the cost of buses. So they will have a significant savings by not having to run the buses," said Chiarelli.

That was the plan until the TTC, which was cut out of the picture Wednesday, said Stintz.

Stintz said she was pleased by Metrolinx assurances that TTC riders wouldn't pay an additional fare to ride the new provincially owned, privately operated LRTs.

"But it's still unclear how the TTC sets fares for a private operator," she said.

New MPP bill.
Family of slain attendant backs gas payment law

The family of a Toronto gas station attendant killed as a motorist fled without paying for $112 of gas is throwing their support behind a private member's bill aimed at preventing similar incidents.

Jayesh Prajapati, 44, died Saturday night at the Shell station where he worked while trying to stop the driver.

Prajapati's family, including his 11-year-old son, Rishabh, looked on as Liberal MPP Mike Colle outlined his bill, introduced Thursday, that calls for a mandatory prepayment system at gas stations.

Notably absent was Prajapati's wife, who brother-in-law Hemant Kumar said is beside herself with grief.

The family has told the media that Prajapati's pay had been docked in the past for gas stolen on his watch, an illegal practice that violates the Employment Standards Act.

Shell Canada has denied the claim. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ford himself sought speedy street repair

Special request.
Official says work often expedited after corporate requests

No comment

- Mayor Rob Ford deliberately avoided the media on Thursday, leaving from a side door at the island airport after returning to Toronto from Chicago. His spokesperson would not comment, either, referring reporters to a statement that said Deco got no special treatment.
- Ford is also facing heavy criticism for using his office staff and city resources to help with his football team.

Mayor Rob Ford personally asked senior city officials to approve drainage and pothole repairs outside his family's company in time for its 50th anniversary — but when the Torstar News Service asked the city who had made the request, an official incorrectly said it was a company representative other than the mayor or Coun. Doug Ford.

An aide for the mayor asked city transportation staff to come to Greensboro Drive beside the Deco Labels and Tags building in mid-July. The city complied, holding a meeting at the Etobicoke site with the mayor himself and his special assistant Chris Fickel, acting transportation chief John Mende said Thursday.

Later in the month, Ford asked Mende and deputy city manager John Livey to meet him for the sole purpose of getting an update on the status of the project, Mende said. The project, which included repairs, was completed last month at a cost to the city of $7,000 to $10,000.

Even his council allies believe he should not have made the repair request himself.

"I think the mayor needs to separate his mayoral duties and his city duties from his personal and business relationships," said Coun. Denzil Minnan-Wong, the public-works chair.

Mende said the transportation employee who originally said Ford was not involved was unaware at the time that the request had come from the mayor.

Has UFC growth hit plateau?

Fight night. Tickets are still available for UFC 152 in Toronto

Judging by the turnout of fans and sponsors at the news conference hyping Saturday's Ultimate Fighting Championship event at the Air Canada Centre, the company that hopes to take fighting mainstream still has the sports public enamoured.

While spectators nearly outnumbered reporters in the main room at the Real Sports Bar and Grill, logos from promotional partners both niche (Xyience Energy Drinks) and mainstream (Bud Light) appeared prominently on the podium and backdrop.

But while introducing Saturday's combatants, UFC Canada president Tom Wright uttered something UFC executives rarely have to say two days before a major event: Tickets are still available.

When the UFC first came to Toronto in 2011, it sold out the 55,000-seat Rogers Centre in minutes. This time a venue less than half the size of the Rogers Centre remains unfilled, even with one of the sport's biggest stars, Jon (Bones) Jones, headlining the main event.

Has the UFC's popularity suffered a body blow in the 17 months since its first visit to Toronto?

Wright acknowledges relatively tepid ticket sales, but says the UFC brand is at least as strong as it was last spring.

He says recent market research by the UFC concluded the outfit is the fourth most-watched sports league in Canada, ranking behind the NHL, the CFL and the NFL.

Last year, the league signed a seven-year broadcast deal with Fox, and recently UFC CEO Lorenzo Fertitta has spoken of an ambitious expansion into Asia.

But the UFC's rapid expansion includes numbers difficult to ignore.

In 2008, the UFC hosted 12 pay-per-view events, purchased by an average of 527,000 households, according to the online database mmapayout.com.

By 2011, the number of pay-per-view events had risen to 16, while the average number of purchases dipped to just under 422,000.

So far this year, the UFC has averaged 427,000 purchases for each of its nine pay-per-view broadcasts.

In an interview with Torstar News Service last year, Fertitta explained slumping pay-per-view numbers as a function of injuries that forced late changes to fight night lineups. He also pointed out that UFC cards were so entertaining overall that the company never had to cancel an event, even if a headliner had to drop out.

But star power still matters.

"The factor affecting demand is the quality of the main event matchup," says Steven Salaga, a sports economist at the Florida Institute of Technology.

Eight days before an event scheduled for Labour Day weekend, Jones' opponent withdrew with a knee injury, and when Jones refused a hastily arranged replacement bout UFC president Dana White cancelled the entire card.

Some observers see the cancellation as a sign that the balance of power is shifting from UFC leadership to individual stars like Jones, who are increasingly aware of their marketing power and can use it as leverage in negotiating with the company.

But Salaga points out that even stars like Jones can't earn as much money in smaller promotions as they can in the UFC, making power plays over the promotional outfit nearly impossible.

Even Jones recognizes it.

"I'm not a UFC executive," he said Thursday. "I have absolutely no power to cancel an event." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The Royal recruits barnyard animals for art piece

Chicharon, an 11-year-old Argentinian horse, gets its hooves into the job of creating art to help celebrate The Royal Winter Fair. COLIN MCCONNELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

He's not the first abstract artist to go by one name, and when it comes to accepting a challenge, "George" is no chicken.

In fact, he's a handsome Dark Brahma rooster, and one of a number of farm animals who "painted" a huge canvas, spread out on the grounds of a King City farm, on Thursday.

The idea was to create a "unique piece of artwork painted solely by animals" which will be photographed and turned into the official poster for the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair.

"Ninety years is a major milestone," said Sandra Banks, CEO of the fair, which started in 1922 and is now the largest annual indoor agricultural and international equestrian competition in the world. "It's all because of the animals, and we wanted the animals to be the artists this year."

Normally, the organizers of the fair, which runs Nov. 2 to 11 at Exhibition Place, would commission an artist to create the annual promotional poster.

But this year, they decided to use the artistic talents of George, two horses, two cows, a ram, a hen, a duck and a goose to create a unique piece of abstract artwork made up of animal tracks.

Using multiple colours of non-toxic, water-soluble acrylic paints, the animal handlers gently dabbed feet and hooves with paint and sent the animals one at a time to plod, trot or waddle over the eight-by-3.6-metre canvas. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The farmer

George was dumped on the road outside Charles Burns' farm about a year ago.

- "I thought it was insane," he said of being asked to host an animal art show. But Burns is a big supporter of the Royal. His family has shown animals there since 1947.

Watchdog says Canadians kept in dark on program cuts

Parliamentary budget. Lack of detailed info makes it impossible for MPs to scrutinize government spending, watchdog says

Canadians are being deliberately kept in the dark about how billions of dollars in the Harper government's spending cuts may reduce the services and programs they count on from Ottawa, says the federal spending watchdog.

The government's stance is making it impossible for Members of Parliament to exercise their duty to scrutinize government spending, said Parliamentary Budget Officer Kevin Page. "The system is being totally undermined," he told Torstar News Service.

Page's dispute with Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government arises from spending restraint measures introduced in the March 29 federal budget. It called for the elimination of 19,000 federal jobs over three years as part of reductions in Ottawa's spending of $5 billion annually. Together with other restraint measures since 2010, this will lead to a reduction in federal spending of $37 billion over five years, the Parliamentary Budget Office estimates.

Since the bulk of the Harper government's cuts come from direct spending programs run by federal departments, Page wants to know where the reductions will be realized and how services and programs for Canadians will be affected.

"The government is basically saying they could freeze operational spending, freeze direct program spending, for five years and it will have effectively no impact on services," said Page, who has often been at odds with the Conservatives as head of the four-year-old PBO. "And they're not telling us where the axe is going to fall within federal departments."

Next week Page will start publishing post-budget spending records based on internal government data, which will give MPs and the public a snapshot of how government spending is rising or falling for specific programs. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Request denied

In April, Parliamentary Budget Officer Kevin Page wrote to the heads of all government departments and agencies and, citing his required reporting role for MPs, asked for detailed information on how cutbacks would change federal employment levels and services for Canadians.

- Only a handful of departments replied and Privy Council Clerk Wayne Wouters, who functions as the head of the prime minister's department, wrote Page to say that government departments should not provide the requested information.
- Wouters said the government had to ensure that federal employees who might be losing their jobs were informed before details on cutbacks became public.

Liberals move to freeze wages for Ontario public service execs

Finance Minister Dwight Duncan, at a press conference at Queen's Park Thursday, announces that Ontario public sector execs will have their salaries capped as part of the province's effort to reduce its deficit. MICHELLE SIU/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ontario's cash-strapped Liberal government moved Thursday to hold the line on salaries for senior public sector executives as a "symbolic" sign of fairness before it legislates a pay freeze for about 1.3 million workers.

"You cannot ask a front-line teacher (or) health-care worker to take a freeze when non-bargained employees effectively aren't," said Finance Minister Dwight Duncan.

Duncan promised legislation to permanently cap salaries for public sector executives at hospitals, universities, agencies and the civil service at $418,000 — twice Premier Dalton McGuinty's pay. However, it won't cut incomes for the 150 public sector managers who already make more than that amount — including hydro executives and hospital CEOs — and will also allow exemptions for jobs such as Chief Nuclear Officer at Ontario Power Generation.

The Liberals will freeze the pay for about 8,800 managers in the Ontario civil service, 98 per cent of whom qualified for a performance bonus in 2010.

The government says freezing the pay of civil service managers will save about $12 million a year.

The Progressive Conservatives have been demanding a legislated wage freeze for the broader public sector to help eliminate the $13-billion deficit, and said Duncan "missed the mark completely" with his announcement. "We need to freeze, we need to fix and we need to reduce, and I see no sign of this," complained PC finance critic Peter Shurman. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A DIFFICULT, CHALLENGING DAY FOR ALL

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

One week ago today, on Sept. 14, a TTC employee tragically lost his life doing his job. Peter Pavlovski was 49 years old. He leaves his wife, Gina, and three young children.

It was a shocking and devastating loss to Peter's family, as well for his co-workers here at the TTC.

There are three parallel investigations ongoing now into this tragic incident. There is a mandated Joint Health and Safety Committee investigation, as well as a Ministry of Labour investigation, and an internal TTC investigation, which is being led by the TTC's head of safety.

The TTC is, and remains, one of the safest public transit systems in the world. Yet, when tragedy strikes, as it did last week, it's incumbent on me as the CEO — and on our board — to understand, fully, what happened to ensure it never happens again.

As a customer who relies on the TTC to get to where you need to go, you need to know that your safety is our first priority. The TTC will never compromise employee or customer safety in the name of service, or anything else. Delays may occur on the system that are inconvenient, and while we have a number of mechanisms to communicate those delays with you, you need to be assured that we will never operate a bus, streetcar or subway train unless it's absolutely safe to do so.

I want to thank you, our customers, for the many kind words of sympathy you have shared with us and Peter's family. I also want to thank you for your patience and understanding as we worked to augment service to get you to where you needed to go during a difficult and challenging day.

• Last Friday's incident caused us to cancel the planned customer-service town-hall meeting scheduled for Etobicoke the next day, Sept. 15. Customer service remains a key priority for the TTC as we continue to modernize and improve the transit system in Toronto. The next town hall is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 15, at Toronto City Hall, starting at 7 p.m. I hope to see you there.

HAVE A QUESTION?

Have you ever wondered why a streetcar short-turns? What signal problems are? Or how the TTC decides which routes see service increases? Now is your chance to find out. Toronto Moves is adding a new feature called Ask TTC and we're inviting customers to submit their questions. Send us an email at AskTTC@metronews.ca. Your question and our response could be published in an upcoming edition of Toronto Moves.

Ask TTC is the latest move to make the TTC more transparent in the way we operate. Whether it's a question about our dedicated staff of dispatchers, engineers, electricians and operators, or an inquiry regarding route changes, modernization projects or customer service, we want to hear from you.

For those looking for an immediate response, contact our Customer Service Centre between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. at www.ttc.ca, on Twitter via @TTChelps, in person at TTC Head Office above Davisville Station or by phone at 416-393-3030.

The TTC provides customers with all of the tools they need to plan their trip. By signing up to receive TTC eAlerts, customers are kept up-to-date on all major service delays across the entire TTC network of subways, buses, streetcars and the SRT.

The eAlerts originate directly from the TTC's Transit Control Centre, so when a delay occurs, customers are informed in a timely manner. When registering to receive TTC eAlerts, customers sign up to receive information about service delays across the entire system, or if they wish, just on the routes they use. The choice is yours.

eAlerts are sent 24/7. Not only do customers find out about where the delay is, but also the estimated length of a delay if known, as well as an ALL CLEAR notice once service returns to normal.

31.5% kids in Canada overweight or obese

Report. Latest number an all-time high

Almost a third of Canadian children are either overweight or obese, says a report from Statistics Canada that bases its figures on the World Health Organization method of determining ideal weights for youth around the globe.

Using data from the 2009-2011 Canadian Health Measures Survey, the federal agency says 31.5 per cent of children aged five to 17 — or an estimated 1.6 million individuals — are overweight or obese.

The proportion was slightly higher among younger youth. Almost 33 per cent of five to 11-year-olds were overweight or obese, compared to 30 per cent of those 12 to 17.

The percentage of kids who were overweight — but not obese — was similar across age groups.

The proportion of Canadian kids and teens who are overweight or obese is at all-time high, say experts.

Wind power still controversial

A wind power developer says the federal government is treating his industry differently than it treats other energy sources such as the oilsands.

Last summer, Health Minister Leona Aglukaak announced a $1.8-million study on the health effects of wind turbines.

John Andrews of wind developer IPC Energy in Ontario asked if the department was doing a similar study involving the oilsands, he was told the oilsands come under provincial jurisdiction.

Andrews points out wind power is also regulated entirely by the provinces.

The energy source is highly controversial in Ontario.

Provincial Conservatives have called strongly for a moratorium on any further development.

Military turns off information tap

Members of the Canadian military have been told to tighten the screws and withhold information, even though it may not be sensitive or a threat to national security.

The unusual directive, known as a CANFORGEN, was written last year by the country's deputy top commander in response to a media story examining National Defence finances.

The 2011 Ottawa Citizen newspaper story looked at lapsed funding — cash the department was unable to spend on capital projects — and came at the height of the last federal election campaign.

It was deemed to have contained "information that was not meant for wider or public consumption," but the data had not been designated either secret or protected.

American war resister turns herself over to U.S. authorities

Kimberly Rivera. Soldier living in Toronto came to Canada in 2007 to avoid service

An American soldier who sought refuge in Canada after she became disillusioned with the Iraq war has turned herself over to the United States.

The War Resisters Support Campaign says Kimberly Rivera was immediately arrested, detained and transferred to U.S. military custody after presenting herself at the border.

The group says Rivera is now waiting to be transferred to a different military facility where she faces punishment for being absent from her unit.

It also says Rivera's husband and her four children crossed the border separately so the kids wouldn't have to see their mother being detained.

The secretary to Immigration Minister Jason Kenney has confirmed the deportation and says the Harper government doesn't believe Rivera will be persecuted in the U.S.

Rivera, who lived in Toronto with her family, came to Canada in 2007 to avoid further U.S. military service.

Ken Marciniec of the War Resisters Support Campaign says two other Iraq war resisters who were deported in the past faced year-long jail sentences for desertion.

Rivera told reporters last month that her biggest fear about being deported was being separated from her young children, and having to sit in a prison, for being against the Iraqi conflict. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pussy Riot. Band member's husband seeking U.S. human rights sanctions

The husband of one of the imprisoned members of the Russian punk rock band Pussy Riot wants U.S. sanctions against Russian officials involved in prosecuting the musicians.

Petya Verzilov was meeting on Thursday with U.S. lawmakers and aides involved in drafting legislation that would target Russian officials linked to human rights abuses. Verzilov is married to band member Nadia Tolokonnikova.

The punk band members were sentenced in August to two years in prison for performing an irreverent song mocking Russian President Vladimir Putin inside Moscow's main cathedral.

Verzilov hopes the legislation could be used to pressure Russian officials to release his wife and others. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pastor seeks to preach after dark

A street preacher sued Thursday to block a New Orleans ordinance that restricts religious or political speech on Bourbon Street after dark.

In his federal lawsuit, pastor Paul Gros claimed the city's "aggressive solicitation" ordinance sets limits on free speech.

PQ 'bothered' by accused shooter's media access

The Quebec government is examining how accused killer Richard Henry Bain was able to speak to the media from a detention centre.

The Parti Québécois' new public security minister says he's bothered that the man accused of shooting two people at a PQ victory rally on election night had access to a radio audience.

Bain called a Montreal station on Wednesday and small snippets of a 38-minute interview were aired on English- and French-language stations of the Astral Radio network.

The accused shooter reportedly told the network he'd had a vision from God that Montreal should become its own province and separate from Quebec. He did not want to talk about events on election night — just about his political views.

On his way into Thursday's cabinet meeting, Public Security Minister Stephane Bergeron said he will investigate whether a prisoner should have access to a phone in order to transmit messages through the mass media.

"It seems worrisome to me," Bergeron said. "I'll look into it and get back to you."

"The question is whether a prisoner should have access to that type of platform to express himself in the public arena." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Visit by UN officials stirs large protest led by Buddhist monks

Sri Lanka. Flocks of protesters complain country is being unfairly criticized for poor human-rights record

Hundreds of Sri Lankans protested Thursday against a visit by UN officials to discuss human-rights issues during the country's civil war.

Monks led about 300 protesters from the Buddhist nationalist National Heritage Party during the demonstration opposite a local UN office. They complained Sri Lanka is being unfairly criticized for a poor human-rights record as the war was ending in 2009.

They alleged the visit was a step toward subjecting Sri Lanka to an international war-crimes investigation.

Three representatives from the UN human-rights commission have met Sri Lankan officials and ethnic Tamil politicians, and seen areas ravaged by war on their visit.

A UN report found evidence the government and Tamil Tiger rebels committed rights violations during the war. It said tens of thousands of civilians may have been killed in the final stages of the fighting, though there are no clear estimates available.

The UN Human Rights Council adopted a resolution earlier this year urging Sri Lanka to investigate alleged war crimes committed by both sides. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poland protested a Ukrainian photo exhibition Thursday, featuring models dressed as Catholic nuns posing next to the graves of Polish soldiers — an incident that threatened to upset close ties between the two neighbours as Kyiv relies on Warsaw's help in its push to integrate closer with the European Union.

The protest came during a visit by Polish President Bronislaw Komorowski, who is pressing Ukraine to commit to European democratic and human-rights standards if it wants to join the European club.

On Friday, Komorowski and Ukrainian President Viktor Yanukovych are to unveil a memorial outside Kyiv to thousands of Polish officers killed by Josef Stalin's secret police at the start of the Second World War.

The photographs, taken by a Ukrainian fashion magazine and displayed at a museum last week, showed the women striking provocative poses next to a bare-chested young man and against the backdrop of crosses at a cemetery in the western city of Lviv. The graves are of Polish soldiers who died when Poles and Ukrainians battled for control over Lviv in the wake of the First World War.

Poland's Foreign Ministry said Thursday that its diplomats in Lviv protested "the impropriety of the exhibition, which could hurt feelings and provoke controversy" and were able to get the exhibit closed.

"It was horrible, it insults the memory of soldiers, of the state, of everyone," said Emil Legovich, a leader of the Polish community in Lviv. He speculated that the exhibit was organized by certain "political forces" in order to sabotage Polish-Ukrainian relations ahead of Ukraine's hotly contested parliamentary election next month. 1,000-year-old village unearthed

Archaeologists have unearthed remnants of what they believe is a 1,000-year-old village on a jungle-covered mountaintop in the Philippines with limestone coffins of a type never before found in this Southeast Asian nation, officials said Thursday. National Museum official Eusebio Dizon said the village on Mount Kamhantik, near Mulanay town in Quezon province, could be at least 1,000 years old based on U.S. carbon-dating tests done on a human tooth found in one of 15 limestone graves he and other archaeologists have dug out since last year. Making scents of chaos

Afghan agriculture. You've heard about the Jasmine Revolution — here's one that started with orange blossoms

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

Can perfume rebuild a shattered country? Barbara Stegemann says yes. The Canadian entrepreneur has given international development a chic twist, buying fair-trade herbs from crisis-hit nations to create her perfume line, The 7 Virtues.

The mission began in Afghanistan. After a soldier friend was wounded, Stegemann wanted to prove that economic empowerment could undermine the country's heroin economy and the Taliban that controls it. The path led to Jalalabad, a city famous for its orange blossoms, and a struggling supplier.

"He was about to give up," Stegemann recalls. "It was a financial risk but I wanted to show that another way is possible." She invested $2,000 and, in 2010, launched her Afghanistan Orange Blossom fragrance. The first batch sold out and she soon secured financing through the hit TV show Dragon's Den.

The investment allowed her supplier to develop his business and take on more staff. In turn, this brought new investment in traditional Afghan products.

"This type of foreign involvement has made a positive change for the crafts," said Waheed Khalili, director of the Turquoise Mountain Institute for Afghan Arts and Architecture. In three years, employment has grown 70% in the industry, he says.

Development NGOs believe such projects can have a lasting impact. "Giving ordinary Afghans the chance to find stable, legal work allows them to plan for the future, to improve their lives and that of their children," says Fernando Soares, deputy executive director of Mercy Corps. "This helps lay the foundations for a peaceful and productive Afghanistan."

The 7 Virtues has also made female empowerment an issue. Stegemann's suppliers are leading employers of women, and the profits have helped to expand schools for girls. Stegemann wants to see more female influence at home, too, and sees her perfume as a route into politics.

The scents are becoming more ambitious. The latest blends Israeli and Iranian ingredients for an anti-war protest. Stegemann is also lobbying Israeli politicians to help her establish a Palestinian distillery.

But the causes are too important for politicians alone. "Citizens have to take action," she says. "If you stay the course, you will see results."

Petal power

"We don't often have a way to touch peace, yet we own voting and buying power."

Barbara Stegemann, founder of The 7 Virtues Beauty Inc., on female empowerment through local development

Looking into the future: Jalalabad-based distiller Abdullah Arsala says he believes perfume-making will expand as a positive business in war-torn Afghanistan. CONTRIBUTED/ABDULLAH ARSALA

Building bridges. Perfume of peace

Stegemann is not the first to create a scent with a message. French perfume maker Francois Coty used his cosmetics empire to launch a fascist party before the Second World War.

More recently, Israeli-German photographer Daniel Josefsohn created the "MoslBuddJewChristHinDao" fragrance in an effort to promote religious tolerance, later shortened to the easier "Unifaith."

With the U.S. election campaign in full swing, the perfumers at Bliss have made it an "eau-lection" with scents for both candidates. Supporters can show their colours by choosing between "Mint Romney" and Orange "O'bama."

KIERON MONKS/METRO WORLD NEWS

Q&A

'The potential is huge'

What is the tradition of Afghan perfume?
The first rose was distilled here and the oil has been used in Islamic medicine for centuries. The Jalalabad region was known for its gardens full of flowers and native plants, and the culture of making compounds from them.

How difficult is it for farmers to switch to perfume from poppy?
It's not easy to convince them because the poppy is quick and has more value. But the rose flowers here are the next best and the government has given subsidies for the first three years for farmers who switch, because that is how long it takes for them to bloom. If there is a group of farmers who switch together, the Taliban cannot fight them.

What is the future for your business?
Industrialized distillation is still new here and we have problems with energy and electricity. But the potential is huge and now we know the market will expand and employ more people.

Obama, Clinton speak out on anti-Islam film debacle with TV ad

Pakistan. Islamabad's American Embassy takes steps to ease controversy over U.S.-produced movie

The American Embassy in Islamabad, in a bid to tamp down public rage over the anti-Islam film produced in the U.S., is spending $70,000 to air an ad on Pakistani television that features President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton denouncing the video.

The State Department said Thursday the embassy had compiled brief clips of Obama and Clinton rejecting the contents of the movie and extolling American tolerance for all religions into a 30-second public service announcement that is running on seven Pakistani networks. Obama and Clinton's comments, which are from previous public events in Washington, are in English but subtitled in Urdu, the main Pakistani language.

Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland said the aim was to get the messages to the widest possible audience in Pakistan, where tens of thousands of protestors angry about the film tried to reach the U.S. embassy before being turned back by Pakistani police. She said embassy staffers had decided the ads were the best way to spread the word. The seven networks have a potential audience of 90 million people, she added.

"The sense was that this particular aspect of the president and the secretary's message needed to be heard by more Pakistanis than had heard, and that this was an effective way to get that message out," Nuland told reporters in Washington. The ads are not running in other countries, she said.

In the ad, Obama is seen talking about America's tradition of religious tolerance and Clinton is seen saying that the U.S. government had nothing to do with the video that contains vulgar depiction of the Prophet Muhammad. "We absolutely reject its content and message," Clinton says in the advertisement.

U.S.-Muslim relations

Protests suggest Muslims as angry at U.S. as 4 years ago

Images of angry mobs in Arab cities burning American flags and attacking U.S. diplomatic posts suggest the Muslim world is no less enraged at America than when President George W. Bush had to duck shoes hurled at him in Baghdad.

But more than three years after President Barack Obama declared in Cairo that he would seek "a new beginning" in U.S.-Muslim relations, a closer look reveals strides as well as setbacks.

One U.S.-led war is over and another is receding, although there are questions about whether America has made lasting gains in Afghanistan. The Arab Spring revolution, a spontaneous combustion that happened independent of Western influence, has given people new power and hope as well as democratic elections.

But peace between Israel and the Palestinians is nowhere in sight, Iran is seen as a menace and broad mistrust with America is still pervasive across much of the Muslim world. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Helping hand. Harper introduces EI changes to help parents, others

The Harper government is spelling out proposed changes to the employment insurance system to help parents of sick children.

Human Resources Minister Diane Finley has tabled legislation in the Commons that would provide EI benefits to such parents.

The Helping Families in Need Act, once law, will also change the Canada Labour Code to protect the jobs of parents who take a leave of absence to care for a critically ill child.

Also, new provisions under the Employment Insurance Act would make parents eligible for sickness benefits should they fall ill while collecting parental benefits.

The bill would also help other Canadians providing benefits to the parents of missing and murdered children and allow for unpaid leave for parents whose child dies or disappears in a suspected criminal offence.

National strike. Protests against a government decision to cut fuel subsidies and open retail markets to foreigners

An Indian man sleeps on a handcart in front of closed shops during a strike in Gauhati, India, Thursday. ANUPAM NATH/AP

Angry opposition supporters disrupted trains in India on Thursday but had only limited success in enforcing a national strike to protest a government decision to cut fuel subsidies and open the country's huge retail market to foreign companies.

Political backlash against the economic reform package presented by the Cabinet last week has left Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's coalition scrambling to shore up its support and prevent early elections.

Some government allies have joined opposition parties in throwing their support behind the protests, which closed many schools and kept commercial trucks off the roads. However, many shops and businesses remained open, and the impact of the protest was barely felt in the main cities of Mumbai and New Delhi.

In a signal the government was on shaky ground, however, many of the protests in Uttar Pradesh state were led by the Samajwadi Party, which has been supporting the government from outside the fragile ruling coalition. In Uttar Pradesh and Bihar state, protesters blocked railroad tracks. Some burned an effigy of Singh on the tracks, while others carried signs reading: "Go Back Wal-Mart," a reference to the U.S. retail giant that is expected to enter the Indian market under the new regulations.

Singh stunned the country with last week's raft of reforms.

We have tried to assure everybody that there was no other way except to take that decision to keep the economy on track," said Information Minister Ambika Soni.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bitter pill, angry populace

"India is heading toward economic slavery," Rajnath Singh, a leader of the opposition Bharatiya Janata Party, said during a protest Thursday. He warned that the entry of Wal-Mart would flood India with Chinese-made goods, hurting local farmers, manufacturers and retailers.

- Opponents said the fuel hike would spark higher inflation and hurt the country's poor. They said opening up the retail sector to foreign giants would crush the nation's millions of small retail shops.
- The Trinamool Congress party announced it would pull out of the coalition Friday unless the package was withdrawn.
- Finance Minister Palaniappan Chidambaram said the reforms would stand.

War-zone birth comes as surprise to servicewoman

Baby conceived before tour of duty. British soldier stationed in Afghanistan unlikely to face censure

Hours after a British soldier in Afghanistan told medics she was suffering from stomach pains, the Royal Artillery gunner unexpectedly gave birth to a boy — the first child ever born in combat to a member of Britain's armed forces.

Britain's defence ministry said Thursday the soldier told authorities she had not been aware she was pregnant and only consulted doctors on the day that she went into labour.

The soldier, who arrived in Afghanistan in March, delivered the child Tuesday at Camp Bastion, the vast desert camp in southern Afghanistan's Helmand province where Prince Harry is deployed and a Taliban attack last week killed two U.S. Marines.

"Mother and baby are both in a stable condition in the hospital and are receiving the best possible care," the ministry said in a statement. It said a team of doctors would fly out to Afghanistan in the coming days to help the soldier and her son return safely to Britain.

The U.K. does not allow female soldiers to deploy on operation if they are pregnant. Although the soldier's child was conceived before her tour of duty began in March, she is not likely to face censure.

Britain has previously sent female soldiers home from wars after they became pregnant — including about 60 from Afghanistan — but hasn't previously had a servicewoman go into labour in a war zone.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Giving pregnant pause

- Maj. Charles Heyman, a retired officer and author of The British Army Guide said the unexpected birth would cause some concern at the base.
- "This sort of thing makes life difficult for everyone else, but the important thing is the welfare of the female soldier. This could have gone wrong and we don't know if the attack on Camp Bastion might have forced the birth," said Heyman.
- Heyman said it may have been "that the excitement of the tour masked the symptoms of the pregnancy."

Troop names foundling Pola

Islamic arts take wing at Louvre

The Louvre Museum is unveiling a new wing and galleries dedicated to the arts of Islam, culminating a nearly $130-million, decade-long project coming to fruition amid tensions between the Muslim world and the West.

The new dragonfly-shaped building marks the famed Paris museum's greatest development since its iconic glass pyramid constructed 20 years ago. The Department of Islamic Art will exhibit much of the Louvre's 18,000 works, hoping also to foster cultural understanding.

The wing, with its mission of heightening cross-cultural understanding, is opening at a tense — and perhaps opportune — time.

Birth control. Implants, IUDs urged for teen girls

Teenage girls may prefer the pill, the patch or even wishful thinking, but their doctors should be recommending IUDs or hormonal implants — long-lasting and more effective birth control that you don't have to remember to use every time, the leading U.S. gynecologists' group said Thursday.

The IUD and implants are safe and nearly 100 per cent effective at preventing pregnancy, and should be "first-line recommendations," the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said in updating its guidance for teens.

Both types of contraception are more invasive than the pill, requiring a doctor to put them in place. That, and cost, are probably why the pill is still the most popular form of contraception in the U.S.

But birth-control pills often must be taken at the very same time every day to be most potent. And forgetting to take even one can lead to pregnancy, which is why the pill is sometimes only 91 per cent effective. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Need-to-know

- An IUD is a small piece of plastic inserted in the uterus that can prevent pregnancy for up to 10 years. An implant is a matchstick-size plastic rod that releases hormones. It is placed under the skin of the upper arm and usually lasts three years.

Alleged getaway driver nabbed in theft of poker champ

Police have arrested a 21-year-old Gatineau, Que., man suspected of being a getaway driver in an armed robbery of a Quebec poker champion.

Police say two men forced their way into Jonathan Duhamel's Boucherville, Que., home on Dec. 21, 2011, where they beat him and stole more than $100,000 and jewelry.

Duhamel became famous after winning the 2010 World Series of Poker in Las Vegas, taking home $8.9 million US.

PQ makes good on vow to scrap tuition-fee increase

Quebec. Decision comes after 'Maple Spring' that saw student protests erupt across province

The tuition increase that triggered such social strife in Quebec was cancelled Thursday during an action-packed first full day in office for the Parti Québécois government.

The new government repealed the fee hike, by decree, in its first cabinet meeting less than 24 hours after coming to power.

Student leaders cheered the news.

Premier Pauline Marois has acted on a promise that she had made during the election campaign. She announced the decision at a news conference after the cabinet meeting.

Marois said tuition will go back to $2,168 — the lowest in Canada. With the planned increases, it would have been $600 higher this year and would have kept growing each year.

Marois said she will not decrease funding for universities and will make good on a promise to hold a summit on how to fund universities within her first 100 days as premier.

The government policy entering that meeting will be to suggest indexing future fee increases to the rate of inflation.

That would raise tuition by a rate of around one to three per cent most years — compared with the 84 per cent increase over seven years planned by the previous Charest government.

But Marois' inflation-index policy is not set in stone. Some students are pushing for zero tuition, as exists in some other countries. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Student leader Martine Desjardins, left, responds to reporters' questions at a news conference on Thursday in Quebec City. Desjardins applauded the news the Parti Québécois is scrapping the province's contentious tuition increase.

Probation. Senator's wife pleads guilty to causing disturbance on plane

MORGAN MODJESKI
Metro in Saskatoon

Maygan Sensenberger, 23, and Manitoba Senator Rod Zimmer, 69, are entering a new chapter in their relationship — probation.

Sensenberger appeared in a Saskatoon courthouse Thursday morning where she pleaded guilty to causing disturbance and was given a 12-month suspended sentence and probation. A second charge of uttering threats was withdrawn.

Sensenberger became the centre of attention across the country after being arrested for causing a disturbance and uttering threats on a flight from Ottawa to Saskatoon in late August, just days before the couple's first wedding anniversary.

Prosecution told the court that witnesses aboard the aircraft heard Sensenberger allegedly threatening to slit her husband's throat.

Her lawyer, Leslie Sullivan, said her client was happy the ordeal was settled.

"My client is extremely relieved this matter is over," said Sullivan.

"She has been anxious to get this concluded and she just wants to return to her home and get back on with her life."

When asked if she was pleased with the sentencing, Sullivan explained: "I'm very pleased the charge was withdrawn — as it should have been. ... We wanted to deal with it expeditiously and that's what we did."

The court was told that Sensenberger had been drinking at the time of the argument and provincial judge Marilyn Gray said she felt if alcohol hadn't been involved, it would have been a different situation.

She noted that a person's good judgment sometimes goes "out the window" when drinking.

Although there was no mandatory treatment as part of the sentence, Sensenberger will have to undergo any addictions assessment, treatment or counselling that is recommended by her probation officer.

Maygan Sensenberger and her husband, Rod Zimmer, are seen together outside Saskatoon's provincial courthouse Thursday. After she was charged, a court ordered the two to only contact each other through electronic means. Now that Sensenberger has been sentenced, all conditions that were part of her bail no longer apply. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Crash site

YouTube video prompts search for decades-old remains

The 60-year-old wreckage of a Second World War-era bomber in the mountains above Metro Vancouver prompted a search by RCMP for human remains.

Mounties in Pitt Meadows, B.C., received a call about a video posted on YouTube by a group of hikers who claimed there were remains at the site of the 1953 crash.

On Sept. 14 officers, along with a forensic identification specialist and a dog unit, flew into the area and hiked to the remote location to search.

Const. Alanna Dunlop says no human remains were found.

The Mitchell B-25 went down near Pitt Lake in January 1953 during a training flight.

The site was so remote and the route so treacherous that Air Force crews had to wait until the following September to recover the bodies.

Amish convicted of hate crimes in brutal hair attacks

Cut off. Religious dispute pitted children against parents; attacks terrorized the normally peaceful settlements

Sixteen Amish men and women were convicted Thursday of hate crimes including forcibly cutting off fellow sect members' beards and hair in a religious dispute that offered a rare and sometimes lurid glimpse into the closed and usually self-regulating community of believers.

A federal jury found Samuel Mullet Sr. guilty of orchestrating the cutting of Amish men's beards and women's hair last fall. His followers were found guilty of carrying out the attacks.

Mastermind

Samuel Mullet Sr. wasn't accused of cutting anyone's hair. But prosecutors said he planned and encouraged his sons and the others, mocked the victims in jail-house phone calls and was given a paper bag stuffed with the hair of one victim.

Prosecutors and witnesses described how sons pulled their father out of bed and chopped off his beard in the moonlight and how women surrounded their mother-in-law and cut off 2/3 metres of hair, taking it to the scalp.

All the defendants are members of Mullet's settlement near the West Virginia panhandle.

Prosecutors say the defendants targeted hair because it carries spiritual significance.

One bishop told jurors his chest-length beard was chopped to 3.8 centimetres of his chin.

In another attack, a woman testified that her own sons and a daughter cut her hair and her husband's beard.

Witnesses testified that Mullet had complete control over the settlement that he founded two decades ago and described how his religious teachings and methods of punishments deviated from Amish traditions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poisoned agent inquest due

In this 2006 file photo, the coffin of former Russian spy Alexander Litvinenko is carried at Highgate Cemetery in London. CATHAL MCNAUGHTON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Alexander Litvinenko. Russian said Putin was responsible on death bed

A long-awaited inquest into the poisoning death of former Russian agent Alexander Litvinenko should consider whether Russian authorities were involved, the senior British judge who will oversee it said Thursday. But the U.K. government will not let lawyers for the victim's family and the suspects see a report on alleged links between Litvinenko and British intelligence.

Litvinenko's family believes the Kremlin was behind his death from radioactive poisoning in London in 2006. The former security service officer, a critic of the Kremlin, died after drinking tea laced with the rare radioactive isotope polonium-210 at a London hotel.

On his deathbed, he accused Russian President Vladimir Putin of responsibility.

Ben Emmerson, a lawyer for Litvinenko's widow, told a court hearing that it was vital that the inquest investigate "the criminal role of the Russian state." He said that if official Russian involvement was proved, it would constitute "an act of state-sponsored nuclear terrorism on the streets of London."

Judge Robert Owen, who will lead the inquest, said its scope would be decided at a later hearing, but indicated he was inclined to agree it should look at Russia's alleged role.

Owen said it was "to be regretted" that no inquest has been held in the nearly six years since Litvinenko died. He said he would open his inquest as early in 2013 as possible.

The killing cast a pall over U.K.-Russian relations that still persists. British prosecutors have accused two Russians of killing Litvinenko, but Russia refuses to hand them over.

Hazing. Wilfrid Laurier baseball team suspended

The Wilfrid Laurier baseball team will make a final pitch Sunday to save its season after being suspended by the school following a hazing incident.

The varsity men's squad was suspended for a minimum four games Thursday after the entire team participated in the incident, which violated the school's student-athlete code of conduct.

"This isn't a minor thing like having the rookie carry bags to the bus-type thing," said Peter Baxter, the school's athletic director. "Alcohol was involved and there were other issues of de-humanizing, degrading behaviour.

"We have a zero-tolerance policy that is supported by our board of governors and president."

Baxter wouldn't give any specifics on the incident but said no one was injured. Rather than impose a season-long suspension immediately, the school wants to give players the chance to make a case for allowing them to resume playing.

"Sport can be a very powerful platform to educate for the positive, not just the negative and this is what we're asking our athletes to do for themselves," Baxter said. "What I'm saying to them is this is your opportunity to step forward and make effective change long-term because I know me just whacking them on suspension isn't going to change the culture, it will make them more resentful.

"They all think it (hazing) is going to be a bonding experience but there are other ways you can do that nowadays in a positive way."

The team will meet Sunday with Baxter and the co-ordinator of inter-university sport, who will gather with school officials and a decision will be made whether to allow the team to resume playing or extend the suspension through to the end of the 2012 season.

Detroit plant rocked by murder-suicide

Tragedy. Two people dead in incident that began at Chrysler factory

Police say a Chrysler employee fatally stabbed a co-worker at a Detroit factory before killing himself in a city park.

Detroit police Sgt. Alan Quinn says a man was stabbed Thursday morning. Quinn says the suspect fled the factory and was found in the park, where he killed himself.

The Chrysler plant employs more than 3,000 workers.

Chrysler spokeswoman Jodi Tinson says no other employees were injured. Workers on the shift were sent home.

Catholic leader calls for stop to Israel attacks

Holy Land. Vandalism of Christian holy sites prompts Rev. Pizzaballa to voice concerns over Jewish-Christian relations

After a series of attacks by vandals on Christian holy sites in Israel, normally tight-lipped Roman Catholic officials are beginning to speak out, publicly appealing to authorities to take a stronger stand against the violence.

The Rev. Pierbattista Pizzaballa, one of the church's top officials in the Holy Land, said he is worried about relations between Jews and Christians in the Holy Land. He believes the blame can go all around.

"I think the main atmosphere is ignorance," Pizzaballa told The Associated Press.

Because the local Christian population is tiny, "we do not exist for the majority ... They have other priorities," he said. "On the other side, we as a minority maybe didn't invest enough energy and initiatives" to reach out to Israeli Jews.

That may be changing following this month's attack on a well-known Trappist Monastery in Latrun, outside Jerusalem. Vandals burned a door and spray-painted anti-Christian graffiti on the century-old building with the words "Jesus is a monkey." Suspicion has fallen on extremist Jewish West Bank settlers or their supporters, who are believed to be behind a series of attacks in recent years on mosques, Christian sites and even Israeli army property to protest moves against settlements. In response, the church's top officials issued a rare "declaration" calling on Israeli leaders to take action.

It said authorities should "put an end to this senseless violence and to ensure a 'teaching of respect' in schools for all those who call this land home."

Israeli leaders swiftly condemned the attack, and police vowed to bring the vandals to justice. Nearly two weeks later, there have been no arrests.

Air Canada prepares for hiring spree

1,100 jobs available. Positions include flight attendants, customer service agents and baggage handlers

Air Canada says it will hire about 1,100 employees across a number of fields, including 200 at its new low-cost carrier.

The airline said Thursday the jobs are part of its strategy to "seize new commercial opportunities, enhance customer service and renew our workforce."

Air Canada says it will hire about 400 flight attendants and some 500 airport customer service agents and baggage handlers. Sixty customer service agents will be hired for call centres in Montreal and Toronto.

"This recruitment program is consistent with our focus on controlling costs to become more competitive in our various markets," said president and CEO Calin Rovinescu. "At a time when youth unemployment is nearly 15 per cent in Canada, we are pleased to offer exciting career opportunities that will especially appeal to young people."

The company cited attrition as one of the main drivers behind the hiring of customer service agents and flight attendants. In addition to the hires at the main airline, the company will hire about 150 flight attendants and 50 pilots for its low-cost airline, slated to launch in 2013.

Takeover. Nexen shareholders support deal with Chinese firm

The head of Nexen Inc. pitched the benefits of a takeover by a Chinese company Thursday even as the Calgary-based oil and gas company's shareholders overwhelmingly voted to support the politically charged deal.

Still faced with the task of winning approval from the federal government, interim chief executive Kevin Reinhart said the takeover wasn't the end for Nexen — which is active in Alberta's oilsands, the North Sea and elsewhere.

Reinhart said China National Offshore Oil Company will keep the Nexen name and expand the role of the company's Calgary headquarters to manage not just Nexen's assets but also some $8 billion of the Chinese company's other assets in North and Central America.

CAW reaches tentative deal with General Motors

The Canadian Auto Workers said Thursday evening that it has reached a tentative agreement with General Motors. The union had warned earlier in the day that it was prepared to issue a strike notice at GM if talks didn't progress.

The CAW reached a deal with Ford earlier this week. While it is still in contract negotiations with Chrysler, it said on Thursday it is making some progress in those talks and that the company seems more willing than it was to reach an agreement.

Retailing. Reitmans says it can withstand Target's arrival north of border

Women's clothing retailer Reitmans says it's not worried about Target coming to Canada. Chief executive Jeremy Reitman says they've withstood increased competition from U.S. companies before, pointing to Walmart and The Gap.

Reitman says industry observers have previously predicted increased competition would cause the demise of Canada's largest publicly traded apparel company.

But he says Reitmans has done well as the popular U.S. chains have driven traffic to malls and big box outlets where its retail network operates.

Reitman told a CIBC investor conference in Montreal that "we thank God for Walmart." He adds many of its various retail store brands are located in the same shopping areas. Target will replace Zellers stores, which Reitmans said doesn't generate much traffic.

Like many apparel companies, Reitmans has faced the challenges of a tough economic environment and higher fuel and food prices that reduce discretionary spending on non-essential items.

Its revenues and profits fell in the second quarter and it says that the third quarter will be affected by problems with a new warehouse management system at its distribution centre that caused two weeks of delays in product shipments to stores.

The computer crashes were harmful but the new system will allow Reitmans to dramatically cut the time to process merchandise and allow it to do so with far fewer employees.

In addition to adding and refurbishing stores, Reitmans has launched an e-commerce business that allows customers to shop online and have products delivered to their homes or the nearest retail store.

Reitmans has 925 stores in Canada, under the Reitmans, Smart Set, RW & CO., Thyme Maternity, Penningtons and Addition Elle banners. It also provides Thyme Maternity apparel and accessories for sale in 160 Babies R Us stores in the United States and 18 locations in Canada.

On the Toronto Stock Exchange, its shares closed down two cents to $13 in Thursday trading. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Catering to the global gaming crowd

A visitor demonstrates Sony's head-mounted display HMZ personal 3D viewer, which provides a 3-D theatre of music videos, movies and games, at the Tokyo Game Show on Thursday. As smartphones, tablets and other computer-like devices lure people away from the once-dominant consoles devoted to video games, one show participant predicted emerging nations will make up 80 to 90 per cent of the game market in a decade. Yoshikazu Tanaka, founder of rapidly growing Gree Inc. — which has risen to stardom through social games, often played on smartphones — said while game consoles will not catch on in some developing nations, people there do have mobile phones, which presents opportunities for Gree.

Early users not happy with app

Apple is finding this week that creating an alternative to Google Maps isn't a simple walk. Apple released an update to its iPhone and iPad operating system on Wednesday that replaces Google Maps with Apple's own application. Early upgraders are reporting the new maps are less detailed, look weird and misplace landmarks. It's shaping up to be a rare setback for Apple. User reaction on social media has been fierce.

TAKING A BIG GULP OUT OF THE BIG APPLE

THE LIST
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

It's time again for the Metro List, your one-stop shop for conversational tidbits that make you the coolest cat around the cooler.

1 Hockey Night in Canada — NOT. The billionaire owners have locked out the millionaire players, cancelled the pre-season and could cancel the entire season. The rest of us may have to turn to football or soccer … or get a life.

2 The topless Duchess. Variation on that Hans Christian Andersen tale The Emperor's New Clothes. Only in this remake the paparazzi invade the Duchess of Cambridge's privacy and her husband the Duke is not even a little amused.

3 Cross-border crossover. Top U.S. retailer Nordstrom brings its shopping experience to Canada, announcing stores in Vancouver, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal. Hopefully, the Competition Bureau won't make the chain lower the quality of its service and jack up the prices so Canadian retailers can compete.

4 As of Friday, your device is obsolete. Apple starts selling the iPhone 5 in Canada on Friday. For $699 you get a phone that's half an inch longer. Doesn't seem like much, but don't tell the two million people who pre-ordered it in the U.S. I guess size still matters.

5 Speaking of size. As of this week, the mayor of N.Y.C. bans any big sugary drink over 16 ounces. Big Gulp banned in the Big Apple, and it's not even Boston. Start spreadin' the news.

6 Then there's Tupelo Honey. Turns out Mississippi is the fattest place in North America, with 34.9 per cent of its citizens considered obese. That's nuthin'. By 2030, after another 18 years of BBQ, 66.7 per cent of adults in the Hospitality State will be obese. I wouldn't get too smug; an estimated 1.6 million Canadian kids are overweight, and the Big Gulp is still freely available on any street corner.

7 This kid's not all right. Consider the case of Maygan Sensenberger, the wife of Sen. Rod Zimmer. She's 23, barely an adult; he's 69, barely sentient. At least, you have to wonder why else he'd marry someone 46 years his junior. Whatever, the honeymoon's over: Thursday, she pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance last month on a Saskatoon-bound flight, while a charge of threatening her husband was withdrawn. Maybe she wanted to go to Miami.

8 Voyager has left the building. In fact, Voyager 1, which was launched from Cape Canaveral 35 years ago, has left the whole damn solar system, the first human-made device to go into deep space, where no one has gone before. Literally. If aliens ever do intercept the Voyager and listen to the music included on board, they'll have to try to figure out a species that listens to Mozart, Stravinsky … and Blind Willie Johnson.

Mississippi gets an F for fat. The state is the most obese place in North America. GETTY IMAGES

Public-art installation

Whole new world for Columbus

A renowned statue of Christopher Columbus in New York City has its own apartment after it was erected on scaffolding in an art installation by Japanese artist Tatzu Nishi.

The 75-square-metre "living room," complete with sofa, television and coffee table, has been temporarily built around the monument. METRO

Artist's viewpoint

"Obviously, until now, he was up there by himself, alone. So we want to change it into something really homey, warm, domestic-feeling."

Japanese conceptual artist Tatzu Nishi
For 15 years, Nishi has been installing domestic environments around public monuments.

Artwork in detail

- Meaning. "A big point of my work is to change this high level (of the statue) to the same level and you see the sculpture really differently," Nishi told reporters.
- It's upstairs. Installation is accessible via a staircase.
- No more feathers. "After 120 years with only pigeons for company, Columbus is finally getting a taste of the American dream," Public Art Fund's director Nicholas Baume said.

Hand-held action.
End of Watch pays homage to gritty crime dramas, but the shaky camera work gives it an artificial feel

Richard: Mark, End of Watch is all build up. The movie spends an hour-and-a-half introducing its characters, giving us a slice of LAPD life before topping it off with an exciting conclusion. I could have used less Barf-O-Matic hand-held camera work — sometimes it's hard to tell what's happening — but overall I thought this movie worked because of the naturalistic performances and the climax. You?

Mark: And what performances! Both Jake Gyllenhaal and Michael Peña are first-rate, their naturalistic style perfectly matching the you-are-there hand-held camera work. But I also thought the dialogue was far superior to most police thrillers. There's no plot, really — it's a series of episodes in the lives of two LAPD officers, which at times seemed reminiscent of the old TV series Adam 12. But there are things that are shown in this movie that would never have happened in the more benign TV show.

RC: It's true. It took me a while to warm to the episodic nature of the "story." I found the first half-hour stagey. The having-the-character-film-part-of-the-movie thing has been done to death, and I thought added a level of artificiality that didn't need to be there. Take that out and no one would miss it. But once I allowed myself to be drawn into the performances and the chemistry of the leads, I was sucked in. I thought the female characters were given more to do than usual in a cop drama, but just barely. Anna Kendrick is so talented, I would have liked to seen her given more to do.

MB: Kendrick barely registered for me; the woman who did was the Hispanic gang leader's significant other. Scary! As far as the ending goes, I thought it was a well-handled climax, but I can't say I didn't see it coming. It's the coda after the climax I thought was unnecessary. It tried to add poignancy to a movie that was thankfully unsentimental throughout.

RC: I agree. It's hard to discuss the end without being spoilerific, but let's say the movie goes from jovial to gritty and then back to jovial again. I didn't love it, but Hollywood seems to be allergic to tragic endings.

MB: Felt like a studio decision and a focus group to me, Richard. But I enjoyed the film anyway. Just remember that much of it is shot shaky style, so sit at the back of the theatre and bring your Gravol!

Synopsis

Jake Gyllenhaal and Michael Peña play officers Taylor and Zavala, patrol cops in Los Angeles's tough South Central neighbourhood. A routine traffic stop turns into something bigger when they confiscate money and guns from a cartel member. "Be careful," they're warned by a senior officer, "You just tugged on the tail of a snake that's going to turn around and bite you."

Man behind the monster. Actor attempts to make slimy hedge fund manager identifiable in latest film, Arbitrage

REBECCA FINKEL
Metro World News in New York

In Arbitrage, written and directed by Nicholas Jarecki, Richard Gere plays a cheating (in every possible way) hedge fund manager who spins a massive web of deception in order to protect his assets. You hate this guy already, right?

But, Gere, a Buddhist, challenged himself to make us see the man behind the monster: the hard worker, the devoted husband — and, well, even the supportive boyfriend. "My job is to take a character like this and to make him identifiable enough that you'll take the voyage with him," Gere tells Metro. "So if I've been successful and you've identified for two hours with a guy who's questionable, I feel good about that. I feel like I've done my job."

Richard Gere and Brit Marling star in Arbitrage, which opens next Friday. HANDOUT

A quotation on the homepage of the Richard Gere Foundation reads, "all the suffering in the world rises out of wanting happiness for self, while happiness in the world rises out of wanting happiness for others."

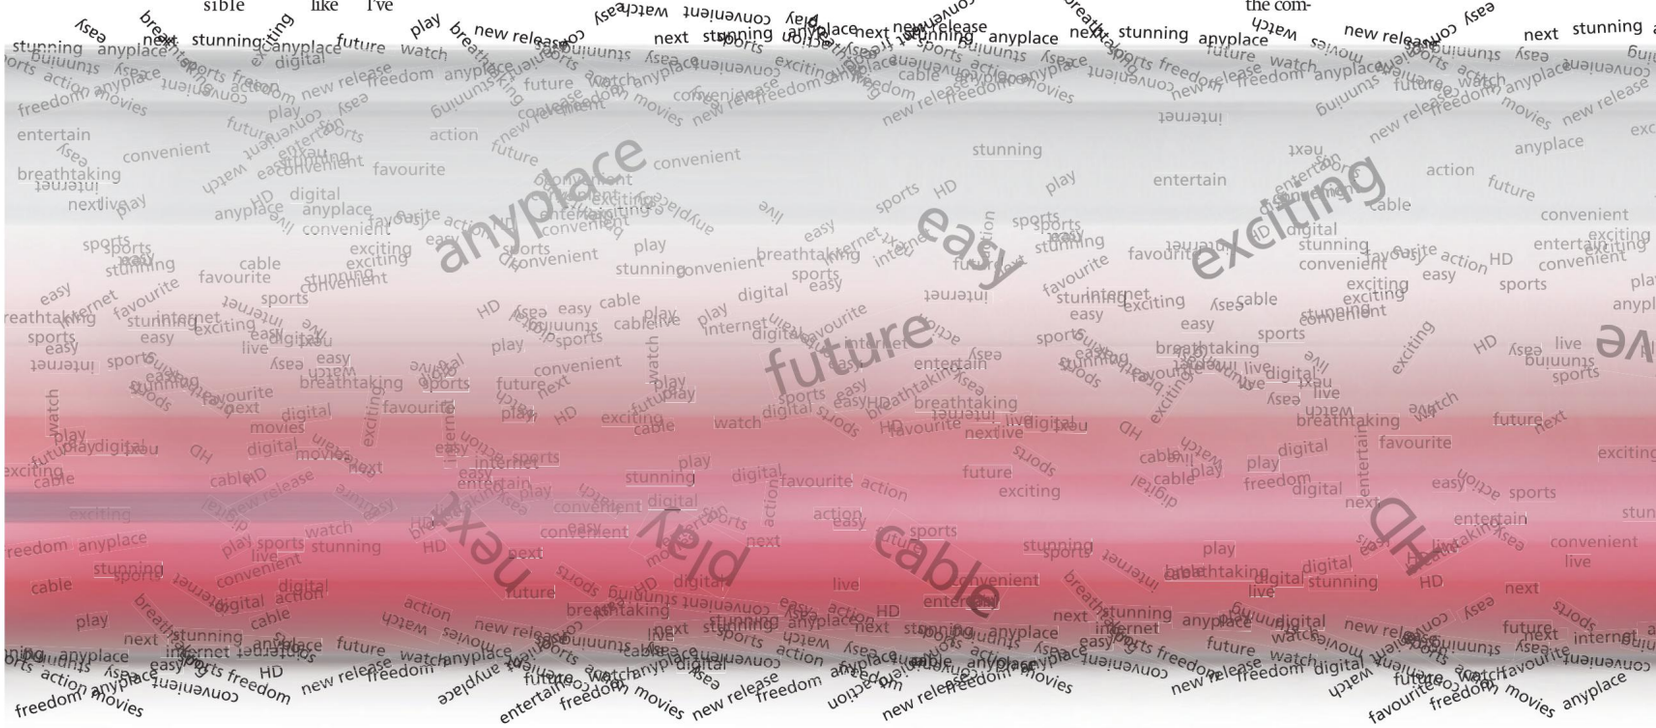
It's by Shantideva.

Is your character seeking happiness for himself or for his family?

He's defined happiness as power, money, place in the community. I would say most of the alpha males tend to think that way: 'I've got the most beautiful woman on the side, I have the beautiful wife, the beautiful house, I'm respected wherever I go, I'm head of the foundation, I'm building a library, I'm a big shot.' Madoff was a big shot in the community. He had a son commit suicide, and he has a wife who never wants to see him again, so you see what happens from seeing yourself as the alpha centre of the universe.

How were you able to create such a sympathetic character?

Although we may not know all of these people in our lives, we certainly can imagine that we know them. It's a version of Rajat Gupta or Bernie Madoff. ... I don't really like the kind of storytelling that decides who the villain is... I have no interest in that.



Younger Olsen carves out her acting niche

Liberal Arts. Actress says she's finally at the point where she can choose roles — and she was thrilled for her latest film

HEIDI PATALANO
Metro World News in New York

For someone who hails from a Hollywood family, you'd expect Elizabeth (Lizzie) Olsen to have some modicum of pretension about her. Older sisters Mary Kate and Ashley Olsen have after all created a fashion empire, part of which bears her name (clothing line Elizabeth and James, after herself and their brother). But when this Olsen enters the room at the Crosby Street Hotel in New York, she settles into a chair, peeling off a blazer because, "you can't see sweat stains anymore" and smiles at us while her publicist cringes.

Short-listed as one of the top rising stars of Hollywood, Olsen has received heaps of praise for her role in last year's dark cult film, Martha Marcy May Marlene. But it wasn't until the script for writer, director and actor Josh Radnor's film Liberal Arts came across her desk that Olsen had felt as though she'd arrived.

"Liberal Arts became the first movie that I actually made the choice to do, whereas all the other movies that I've done were all like 'thank you, thank you, thank you for giving me a job,'" the actress admits. "So Liberal Arts is like, starting movies where I was like 'oh, I think I'd like to do that.'"

Quoted

"They always want to come and visit and I'm like 'I don't know, depends what we're filming that day. Could be really violent, I could be getting raped."

Actress Elizabeth Olsen on letting her parents come watch her film.

In the film, Olsen plays a wise young co-ed who falls for Radnor's character, Jesse, someone 17 years her senior. He finds her at his old alma mater where, in part, he returns for the nostalgia for a better time in his life. Interestingly, the 23 year-old actress seems to have a keen awareness of aging herself.

"I write letters to myself for the future," she says. "I read one from when I was in seventh grade to my graduating senior high school self and that was so crazy, because you feel like you're in a parallel universe where little you is still existing and you're talking to older you and you guys are existing at the same time, it's really crazy."

As for Olsen's future, expect to see her in upcoming dramas Therese Raquin and Kill Your Darlings. She also confirms the filming of Spike Lee's latest film, the thriller Old Boy. But she likely won't be having her parents come for a set visit.

"My parents were shaking their heads when I told them what I have to film," she says with a laugh. "They always want to come and visit and I'm like 'I don't know, depends what we're filming that day. Could be really violent, I could be getting raped.'"

Randy Newman takes jab at racism with political tune

Presidential pride.
Piano track takes a tongue-and-cheek approach to 'the great issue' of the United States

Randy Newman is weighing in on the presidential election, and he's playing the race card through a song he wrote called I'm Dreaming.

The piano tune features the refrain: "I'm dreaming of a white president." It is full of satirical, sarcastic — and signature — Newman anecdotes about someone who votes for the president because he is white.

Newman, who is white, is openly supporting President Barack Obama. He says he wants the public to find comedic relief in the song, but to also know he's serious about his thoughts that racism is well and alive in the world — and in the current presidential race. He called racism "the great issue of this country."

Randy Newman is offering his latest song, I'm Dreaming, as a free download. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I felt that that sentiment exists in the country," Newman said in an interview Monday. "I don't know how many people you can get to admit it. I think maybe zero."

The song will be released as a free download and Newman is encouraging listeners to donate to the United Negro College Fund.

Newman, 68, has won multiple Academy Awards, Grammys and Emmys for composing music for movies such as Cars, Monsters, Inc., the Toy Story franchise and the TV series Monk. He often writes songs from the perspective of a character not like himself. Short People, the 1977 No. 2 Billboard hit, attacked short people. And Sail Away is a come-on from a slave trader to a potential slave.

Slap-sticked together by Halifax comedy troupe Picnicface, Roller Town is the little indie comedy that could. Not only was it made on a skate-string budget, but the gang decided to spoof the arcane fad of '70s roller-rink films (remember Xanadu?). With plenty of silly gags whirling around a bare plot about a skate king who seeks justice against mobsters trying to kill disco, Roller Town stands out — even if it does lose its wheels by the end.

Dredd 3D is not for the faint of heart, filled as it is with endless skinning, stabbing, shooting and head crushing all rendered in some beautifully designed 3D sequences. Spare on dialogue, long on style, pulsing music and violence, Dredd 3D is a gift to serious sci-fi action movie fans.

Trouble with the Curve

Trouble with the Curve is no Moneyball. If anything, it's the antithesis to the acclaimed biopic about using science to shape ball teams. In this, Clint Eastwood is an expired scout that, despite failing eyes and curmudgeonly demeanor, picks players the old-fashioned way — on personality. Too bad there wasn't more personality in the film itself as text-book characters and routine plotting leaves Curve with a sub-par batting average.

House at the End of the Street is notable as actress Jennifer Lawrence's first big screen appearance since her turn in The Hunger Games. Marketed as a supernatural spook show for kids, the film is actually a rock solid, dark and suspenseful thriller armed with further evidence of just how good an actress Lawrence is becoming. Although saddled with a youth friendly PG-13 rating and light on anything visceral, House is actually ample frightening and even disturbing.

Although a touch didactic, the documentary Head Games will surely cause you to think twice about signing up your kid for football. While the film makes a convincing argument about the long-term effects of sports injuries (it doesn't take a scientist to know a few blows to the brain is bad for your health) what's more surprising is how slow the sports industry has reacted to the facts. Then again, the film never really offers a solution either.

Selena Gomez can sympathize with Dracula's daughter

Growing pains. Young actress who voices character in Hotel Transylvania knows what it's like to have wanderlust

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Being Dracula's daughter can be a drag. That's the lesson Selena Gomez learned making Hotel Transylvania, in which she voices the 118-year-old perpetual teenager Mavis, living in the titular lodging with her overprotective father (voiced by Adam Sandler) and longing to see the world.

Despite her character's advanced age, Gomez didn't have too much trouble connecting with Mavis.

"I'm not 118, but it's fun for me to kind of grow up," she says.

"I want to be able to see places, too. I get to travel and I'm very lucky to get to go to the places that I go to, but I never actually have been to the places alone or with friends, and I've never had that, so I think I'm going through that a little bit, doing things on my own a little bit more and having a little bit of that freedom."

In that travel that she's already doing — for work, mostly — she sees her fair share of hotels herself, though they don't necessarily make much of an impression.

"To be honest, I'm in places for, like, a day so I don't even know where I'm staying. My mom's more about spas, so I just kind of follow my mom," she says.

"We stay in different places all the time — fun ones, cool ones. I've stayed in haunted ones too, before. It was actually for my birthday, so this sounds a little weird, but I like getting scared. We were on tour and they had me stay in a hotel in Utah and it was haunted.

"Nothing happened, so I was a little bummed, but it was spooky being there."

Having gotten her start on the Disney Channel's Wizards of Waverly Place, Gomez clearly has a thing for the supernatural — even if the connection hadn't occurred to her before now.

"I didn't even think about that. I guess so," she says with a laugh.

"With my show we were able to bring kids' imaginations to life a little bit. We were able to be invisible and fly and walk on walls, and that's stuff that every kid wishes they had the ability to do.

"We're able to kind of bring that alive a little bit, which is something we're doing with this movie as well. We're bringing all the characters from Frankenstein to Dracula to new characters like the daughter. It's just fun to kind of bring that to life."

And Gomez isn't so worried about bringing those characters — along with mummies and werewolves and other monsters — to a younger audiences. "People have kind of changed their perceptions of monsters within tons of movies that have come out, so in a way it's more fun for kids," she says. "And it's hard to scare kids now, it really is. Going to haunted houses, going to those things, watching those movies, it's hard to scare them."

Laurence Anyways

Director. Xavier Dolan

Stars. Melvil Poupaud, Suzanne Clément

Xavier Dolan, Quebec's 23- year-old cinema wunderkind, delivers another hard-hitting story of sexual and emotional outsiders. This is his most audacious work yet, an intimate mediation on a tumultuous, decade-long love affair between a male heterosexual cross dresser and a woman who vows to support him but loses her way. Poupaud, who transforms into a beautiful woman, navigates the role with sensitivity. Bratty and brilliant, Dolan's groovy aesthetic is mesmerizing and even at 160 minutes, it's hard to look away.

As Quell, Phoenix is a raw twitching nerve, part Brando, part Bukowski. It's an astonishing, revelatory performance that recalls Raging Bull era De Niro. As untamed as Phoenix is, Hoffman is controlled, handing in a performance brimming with confidence, power and charisma. Both are locks for Oscar nominations.

But when her neighbour dies, Pilar meets Aurora's former lover, Ventura, who introduces her to passion and adventure through the story of his ill-fated romance with Aurora. Where Part One of the film is bleak and lifeless, Part Two is filled with emotion and drama. Unfortunately, the two acts hardly seem to fit together.

But in order to understand who his father — the man — truly is, Lee decides to "enter his world" by joining Frank's gym and training under him. As training progresses, Frank begins to open up to his son and the love and respect they've both buried finally begins to surface.

Sorry we missed you!

HPV vaccine is now free for girls born from 1993-1998 who did not receive all 3 HPV vaccines in grade 8.

HPV vaccine prevents cervical cancer and genital warts. It's safe and it works.

Come and see us soon!

Choose from a huge selection of healthy teas and herbal capsules, plus read thousands of testimonials from customers who have drastically improved their quality of life with Bell Lifestyle Products.

Frequent Bathroom Trips?

Bell Prostate Ezee Flow Tea #4a

■ Relief in 3-5 days from dribbling, burning and rushing to the toilet. If you are considering surgery, try this tea first. Must work or money refunded. 99% success rate. Helps virtually everybody quickly. The only prostate remedy that works so well that it comes with a money-back guarantee. Literally hundreds of delighted men testifying on our web site:

■ Doctor said to keep on drinking the tea. Prescribed prostate drugs did not help. Leonard Pearcey, Wasaga, NB ■ I cancelled my prostate surgery. Get up once a night. I'm so happy not to have to face the torment of a prostate operation and incontinence or impotency. Albert E. Blain, 74, Schumacher, ON ■ Even after TURP prostate surgery and microwave therapy had to get up many times. Now down to 1-2 times. Tea is 100% better than drugs. Robert G. Stocker, Eustasis, FL ■ After 1st year drinking tea my PSA went down to 4.5; after 2nd year to 2.9; after 3rd year to 2.3. I highly recommend the tea. A real life saver. Thomas M. Thurston, Forsyth, GA ■ Women suffering with incontinence, bladder infections, UTIs ask for Bladder Control Tea for Women #4b. Guaranteed relief within days.

SNORING? SLEEP APNEA?

As recommended by Dr. Gifford-Jones M. D.

Often snorers also have sleep apnea which causes being tired all day, high blood pressure, heart attacks, strokes, irregular heartbeats (per FDA website). Millions suffer needlessly and can stop their nightly ordeals.

To my surprise, after taking Bell Snoring & Sleep Apnea Relief #23 I really didn't snore or gasp for air anymore. I sleep through the night and feel rested and refreshed in the morning. Mark Wilson, 40, Hudson, NH ■ Sleep apnea capsules worked first night! For last 15 years I had sleep apnea and my doctor made me buy a CPAP machine, which I could not use. Finally Bell #23 helped the first night and every night thereafter. Like a miracle. Unbelievable. Karen Brown, 67, Glace Bay, NS ■ For 20 years I was waking up frequently gasping for air. During the day I would start napping every time I would sit down, because I was tired. Since taking Bell #23 sleeping 6 hours is heaven. It made a substantial change in my life. Mary C. Myrick, 62, Jackson, MS ■ It is such a joy not having to use the CPAP machine. I have had sleep apnea for 10 years. Using Bell#23, my wife says there is no more snoring or stoppage of breathing. It is such a joy to be able to roll to left or right with no hose or mask to deal with. Thank you Bell for a great relief. I suggest anyone with these problems to try it. You will be overjoyed with the results. Wayne Burse, 63, Beamsville, ON.

Allergies are a modern epidemic

■ I used Bell Allergy Relief #24 for 2 years. I tried numerous other remedies all my life that were not effective. Since I discovered #24 I do not have a stuffy nose and itchy eyes when pollen season comes around. No problem working with hardwoods or O.S.B. sheeting. I don't have to walk around like a doped zombie anymore. Leonard Waldner, 44, Delia, AB ■ Last 4 years in spring I had allergy attacks with runny nose, sore throat and headaches. Just 2 capsules Bell Allergy Relief #24 brought relief. Belinda Wilfong, 41, Hillsboro, MO ■ For 20 years my life was miserable with sneezing, watery eyes and sinus pressure year-round on most days. I was amazed. On 3rd day all allergies were gone. It was like magic. Becky Gerber, 25, Dover, OH ■ Golfing without allergy attacks I tried all the medications and none worked. After taking 1 capsule in the morning I'm completely free of all symptoms. Richard Gamez, 74, San Antonio, TX

A devil of a deal

Finding the perfect Manhattan rental is about as easy as making your wildest dreams come true. Residents at The Drake get both — for a price — on 666 Park Avenue, which premieres Sunday, Sept. 30, on Citytv

AMBER RAY
Metro World News in New York

Tenants at The Drake really need to start paying more attention to the fine print on their leases. Sure, the address is great, but signing away your soul is a commitment that's difficult to negotiate your way out of on ABC's new supernatural drama, 666 Park Avenue.

The Drake owner Gavin Doran and his wife, Olivia, take special interest in the aspirations of their tenants, particularly those of new building managers Henry Martin and his girlfriend, Jane Van Veen. Before evil forces evict them, meet the new neighbours.

Gavin Doran, owner of The Drake

Is Gavin a representation of the devil? Terry O'Quinn has an interesting take on his self-interested, wicked character. "My theory is that Gavin's kind of a sharecropper on the plantation of evil," the actor says. "He plants the seeds. He only gets half the harvest. He has to feed some back to the building, but he gets his share and he uses people to his own ends." As for the existence of evil in the real world and people's abilities to indulge in deplorable behavior, O'Quinn believes "it's in (the human) colour wheel. Just depends on how strong it is in yours."

Olivia Doran, wife of Gavin

When Vanessa Williams first read the 666 Park Avenue script, she immediately likened the wealthy real estate icon Gavin to notorious Ponzi schemer Bernie Madoff. "(The Madoffs) had incredible land holdings all over that people knew about and they had a great amount of wealth. And then we all saw the dark side." As for the well-appointed Olivia, Williams says she views her character as "kind of like a mafia wife, where (Gavin) has supreme power. She is aware of a lot of things that happen that are unfortunate. She doesn't know everything ... but she is aware of the makings of what goes on."

Henry Martin, The Drake co-manager

Freshly transplanted from the Midwest, Henry and Jane's eagerness for the promise of New York City may be their downfall. "There's a reason why they moved to New York, and that's their ambition," Dave Annable says. "And I think that Henry and Gavin, their storylines will intertwine. Gavin takes Henry under his wing. I'm very curious to see how that's going to affect Henry and Jane's relationship over the course of the season."

Jane Van Veen, The Drake co-manager

New to New York herself, Rachael Taylor relates to the allure of The Drake. "I just looked for an apartment in New York City and it was really distressing," she admits. As for what happens after Jane and Henry move in, Taylor says the show strives to keep all of the scary supernatural stuff as grounded as possible. "If you have an instinct that something is a little bit creepy-deepy, you will rationally try and resist that as long as you can, because no one wants to really believe that there's a ghost in their basement," she says.

Partners

Polar opposite best friend business partners Joe (David Krumholtz), who is straight, and Louis (Michael Urie), who is gay, bicker about work and life, but can't imagine even a day spent without the other. Their relationship becomes even more complicated when Joe proposes to his girlfriend (Sophia Bush). It's your standard odd-couple sit-com, this one relying on quasi-edgy jokes.
Premieres Monday, Citytv.

Go On
Matthew Perry stars as a recently widowed sportscaster who finds wacky but loving new friends in a grief support group. Now airing Wednesdays on Global.

The New Normal
Every family has a little crazy in it. The loose screw comes in the form of a bigoted grandma (Ellen Barkin) in this sitcom. A committed gay couple (Andrew Rannells and Justin Bartha) hiring a single mom (Georgia King) to carry their child may seem untraditional, but their situation is full of love (and some bitingly funny moments) regardless. Airs Tuesday on CTV.

Ben and Kate
Slacker Ben (Nat Faxon) and frazzled single mom Kate (Dakota Johnson) are odd couple/best friend siblings who become roommates when perennial couch surfer Ben moves in for good. Their affectionately antagonistic relationship will ring true if you grew up close to a brother or sister you also wanted to strangle. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

New Girl
As Jess' (Zoe Deschanel) "adorkable" factor was toned down and focus was put on her friendship with her male roommates (Max Greenfield, Jake Johnson and Lamorne Morris, who proved just as capable playing goofy as their female counterpart), New Girl grew to become last season's best buddy comedy — complete with a drinking game, True American. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

The Mindy Project
The reasons we fell in love with New Girl apply here — Mindy (Mindy Kaling), an OBGYN who doesn't look like she's moonlighting as a runway model, is successful in her professional life but a total failure when it comes to love. A vet of The Office, Kaling brings optimism to the most cynical comedy — the New York City dating scene — even if she does resort to taking advice from a toy. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

Raising Hope
The Chance family (Cloris Leachman, Martha Plimpton, Garret Dillahunt, Lucas Neff) thrives on chaos. Though the show often hits on white-trash humour, what the family lacks in funds — or smarts — they make up for in heart. Premieres Oct. 2, Citytv.

Don't Trust the B---- in Apartment 23
If it weren't for con artist Chloe's (Krysten Ritter) loyalty to equally egotistic pal James Van Der Beek (playing a heightened version of himself) or admiration for new roomie June (Dreama Walker) who lost her big-time NYC gig but won't let the city get her down, Chloe really would be a queen B. Premieres Oct. 22, Citytv.

Forget running: Dance instead to burn calories

Television. DWTS's Tony Dovolani talks dancing for health

LINDA CLARKE
Metro Boston

Tony Dovolani will be dancing on the new season of Dancing With the Stars, which premieres Monday on CTV. HANDOUT

Dancer Tony Dovolani took time out of his hectic Dancing With the Stars schedule to talk to us about how your Saturday swing class does wonders for your body.

Why is dancing a great way to stay fit?
There's a number of ways that dance improves your health. For one thing, it's a social activity. When you're dancing, you're not staring at a treadmill, you're staring at another person — it's interactive. Physically, it works out every part of the body; it works muscles you forget about — small muscles. Dancing burns around 275 calories in a 45-minute session. That's more than running.

What styles of dance give the best workout?
Foxtrot and jive. They build up a lot of stamina. The rumba, too. Some slow dances are great because they require more control and balance. Any ballroom dancing with a partner adds pressure. When you dance by yourself, you have no resistance. When you dance with a partner you have control, you are more aware and the mind is engaged, too.

What should you look for in a dance class?
Start with salsa: It's simple and there's a lot of hip action, which works the midsection.

Are there certain dance moves that people should incorporate into their exercise routine?
Stretching exercises are so important. They activate the body. ... It doesn't need to be extensive if you do it right. Five minutes gets the whole body activated and you're good for the day.

How does what you wear affect how you move?
Start with the right shoes. This is not a pitch. If you are a tennis player or a mountain climber, you wear the right shoes.

I worked on a new design with Capezio that gives the right support and tension. The shoe should have flexibility and strength. All exercise is balance-based and without shoe support, you can hurt yourself. People ask me what's the secret of being a great dancer and I say great balance.

Reinventing a classic

Television. Elementary creator and stars break down their characters

AMBER RAY
Metro World News

Lucy Liu stars alongside Jonny Lee Miller in Elementary. HANDOUT

In the new Global drama Elementary, eccentric detective Sherlock Holmes surfaces in New York City after a stint in rehab. He is forced to accept the aid of a sober companion, Dr. Joan Watson, to help in his recovery, though he believes his best shot at redemption is through helping his pal in the NYPD solve the city's toughest cases. Meet the modern incarnations of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime solvers.

Sherlock Holmes, played by Jonny Lee Miller

His past

"Oh, yeah — he's definitely got mental issues," Miller says. "I wouldn't say a mental illness or anything like that, but he's got issues, personal issues."

Series creator Rob Doherty teases that "something terrible happened to (Sherlock) in London. He spiralled out of control. Our Sherlock has emerged with what I think is at his core just a tiny kernel of self doubt where one previously never existed."

Miller — whose own tattoos are visible in character — says that inner turmoil is what makes the brilliant, yet socially inept, Sherlock relatable.

"He struggles with his own sense of self," Miller says. "People can identify with that."

The present

Whereas some incarnations of Sherlock may have been considered sociopathic, the detective in Elementary isn't simply seeking the thrill of the chase when he takes on a new case.

"Our Sherlock is a puzzle solver," says Doherty. "I see him as someone who is driven … to do the right thing, to help people. At the end of the day, he believes in justice. It's not just about putting bad guys behind bars. Helping people and doing the right thing are factors that play into it as well."

His future

If there is one foe that defines Sherlock, it's Moriarty. Doherty promises the detective's nemesis will factor into the series, but is reluctant to give away too many details.

"He was such a shadowy figure," Doherty says. "I think he was described as the spider at the centre of the web of crime in London. He's the man behind the man behind the man. In other words, there are a few dominos we knock over before we ultimately get to him."

Dr. Joan Watson Played by Lucy Liu

Her past

Though Watson may not act out like the abrasive, dysfunctional Sherlock, the doctor may be just as damaged as her charge.

"She was a surgeon and lost her licence, which gives her sort of a dark past that we still don't know about (in the pilot), and we may not discover for a little while," Liu says. "What we want to do is introduce the audience to the characters, and then sort of slowly unravel a little bit about her personal history."

The present

Watson's obligations to Sherlock are professional — keep him sober and safe — until she realizes she's not such a bad private investigator herself.

"(Watson) is on the sideline (in the pilot), observing him, because she's his sober companion," Liu says.

"So she's not engaged in the mystery. She's engaged in him, and from that point on, then you get to see how that sort of blossoms out."

Her future

With a female Watson as Sherlock's sidekick, is a hookup imminent?

Going back to the source material, Liu notes Sherlock's "awkward relationship with the other gender."

Making his trusted companion a woman, she says, "is a constant reminder of that awkwardness and that division between being a friend," or something more.

Miller insists the friendship is core to Elementary, just as it has been in all other takes on crime fighting duo. But sexual tension, he admits, is inevitable.

"There is that element, and people are going to wonder," he says.

"But then wondering and asking questions is something that you really want your audience to do, isn't it?"

Motivated.

Putting a positive spin

Canadian singer.
Known for her sad, emotional ballads, the local star says she is now going for something upbeat

Canadian singer Sarah McLachlan is penning songs for her next album.
DARRYL DYCK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

After releasing perhaps her saddest album yet, Sarah McLachlan says she's trying to write more upbeat material.

The three-time Grammy winner says she's penned five songs for her next disc but plans to devote more time to new material beginning in late fall, with the tentative aim of releasing a new album in 2013.

That release date might sound optimistic for the methodical McLachlan – but that's right in line with the way she's tried to view the world of late.

"I'm really working on being more positive," the friendly 44-year-old said in a recent interview from Vancouver, where she lives.

"(I'm trying) to think about what it is you want in your life, and then putting it out there, and then trying to sort of not look back.

"And that's been tricky, because in my writing, that's what I do. I look back. I reflect. And I'm really trying to be more forward-thinking in my writing."

McLachlan's effort to let a little more light into her songwriting comes after arguably her bleakest album yet, 2010's Laws of Illusion.

That sad, lovelorn record was released two years after McLachlan split with drummer Ashwin Sood, her husband of 11 years with whom she shares two daughters. The album, which opened at No. 2 on the Canadian chart, found McLachlan probing the remains of her relationship and trying to move forward.

"I went through some (crap)," she says now with a laugh as she casts her mind back to that period.

"There was a lot of real heartfelt stuff on there. But you know, there is on every record. And I think they are all sort of postcards of where I am emotionally. And my outlook is really very positive, and I'm ever hopeful. So I'm really trying to figure out a way to interject more of that into the music.

"I don't know if I'll succeed."

And yet she knows that if she gets too upbeat, fans who flock to her fluttering vocals for a dose of harmonious heartbreak could be, well, heartbroken.

"Yeah, like: 'Oh my God, she's gone on Prozac,"' said McLachlan, who had to cancel a performance at Toronto's Massey Hall on Thursday. "Believe me, there's still going to be some good gut-wrenchers. Because that's my happy place."

The Building a Mystery songwriter will also be feted this weekend when she receives a star on the Canada's Walk of Fame alongside fellow inductees Randy Bachman, former CFLer Russ Jackson and late funnyman Phil Hartman. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Justin Timberlake. Star says he struggles to turn out new music

He brought SexyBack, but don't quite wait for Justin Timberlake to bring his music back — just yet.

The singing superstar said his music making process is fueled by life's experiences and making an album "is a really big deal."

"For me, personally, when I do sit down and decide to do it, it's just a special thing," he said in an interview Wednesday night.

Timberlake is engaged to actress Jessica Biel. He's appeared in a ton of movies in recent years, from The Social Network to Friends With Benefits. This week he's in Trouble With the Curve, alongside Clint Eastwood and Amy Adams.

His last album was 2006's FutureSex/LoveSounds, a Grammy-winning record that launched three No. 1 hits and sold more than four million units in the United States. He's appeared on songs by other musicians but has not released his own music since.

The 31-year-old said he's unlike today's artists, who constantly drop albums and singles.

"I don't know that I can pump them out every year," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Save on Car Insurance by Shopping Around

Nothing to lose, so much to gain.

Getting insurance quotes can be a lengthy process, especially if you're calling around to numerous insurance companies. Online quoting services like InsuranceHotline.com make it easy for drivers to get car insurance quotes that are compared against more than 30 insurance companies – in just 5 to 10 minutes.

Rates change regularly. The most obvious benefit of shopping around for car insurance is the possibility of getting a better rate and saving a lot of money. Because rates change frequently, it's important to check rates periodically, as a rate obtained in the last year could have decreased since then with a different provider. While insurance companies change their rates, your driver profile may have also changed, which will affect your rate – A ticket or accident falling of your record, a vehicle change or a moving to a new home can affect your car insurance rate.

Each insurance company views drivers differently. For drivers with tickets or accidents on their record, the biggest benefit of shopping around is to see which companies may rate that ticket or accident less harshly than others. Each insurance company determines how to rate for different types of tickets or accidents, which means that a better rate may be available somewhere else. In fact, rates can be vastly different for the same driver with the same ticket with two different companies.

Reviewing insurance policy. Shopping for insurance quotes forces drivers to review their policy to make sure that there aren't any errors or omissions about their vehicle or driving history, or perhaps any missed discounts that should be applied. Staying on top of these things ensures having the right coverage and paying the best rate.

Visit InsuranceHotline.com and compare insurance quotes for free, with an unbiased rate comparison from a network of over 30 insurance companies to find a lower car insurance rate. You could save hundreds or even thousands of dollars in just a few minutes.

Making the right choice starts with choice.

Your search for the right insurance rate should be exhaustive, not exhausting. Only InsuranceHotline.com gives you an unbiased comparison of over 30 premier insurance companies, so you can find a rate that works for you — without impacting your coverage.

Visit InsuranceHotline.com and see how a little shopping around could save you hundreds of dollars on your insurance.

Amanda Bynes takes on drunk driving rumours

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Amanda Bynes may be making headlines regularly for her troubles behind the wheel and her increasingly erratic behaviour, but the actress herself is "doing amazing," she tells People magazine during a phone call this week.

"I am retired as an actor. I am moving to New York to launch my career. I am going to do a fashion line," she says. "I am not talking about being arrested for DUI because I don't drink, and I don't drink and drive. It is all false."

But while the former Nickelodeon star herself may think everything's fine, her nearest and dearest aren't so confident.

"People around Amanda are really concerned about her," a source tells the magazine. "She tells people she doesn't party or drink. She doesn't realize she has a problem."

And her behaviour is getting even weirder. On Tuesday night, she was kicked out of a spin class at her L.A. gym, per TMZ.

Apparently, the class had started but Bynes stopped cycling and started wandering around the class. Once she found another bike, she hopped aboard but then took off her shirt, revealing a "tiny black strapless push up bra ... not a sports bra," says a witness.

She cycled a bit more and then stopped to apply make-up for a full 10 minutes before the instructor threw her out. This is sad. All of these stories on Bynes' increasingly weird behaviour reminds me of Brittany Murphy — and we all know how that turned out.

Shakira's hips didn't lie

After months of speculation, Shakira has confirmed that she's pregnant.

"As some of you may know, (boyfriend) Gerard (Pique) and I are very happy awaiting the arrival of our first baby," the singer posted on her website.

"At this time we have decided to give priority to this unique moment in our lives and postpone all the promotional activities planned over the next few days." Shakira was scheduled to perform at the IheartRadioFestival this weekend in Las Vegas, but she's cancelled the appearance.

This is one of the most beautiful and delicious recipes to serve. Use a variety of coloured tortillas to make it even more spectacular. When this dish is cut open to expose the tomato sauce, vegetables and cheese, it looks amazing.

1. Preheat oven to 350 F. Lightly coat a 9-inch springform pan with cooking spray.

2. Lightly coat a non-stick saucepan with vegetable oil and set over medium heat. Add the corn and sauté, stirring often, for about 8 minutes or until slightly charred. Set aside.

3. Add oil to saucepan and keep over medium heat. Add the onion and garlic and cook for 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in the red and green peppers. Cook for 3 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in the tomato sauce, charred corn, basil, chili powder and cumin. Cover and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes or until slightly thickened. Remove from the heat.

4. Place the chickpeas in a bowl and mash them roughly with a fork. Add to the vegetable mixture and stir to combine.

5. In a separate bowl, combine ricotta, mozzarella and cheddar cheeses (but reserve 1/4 cup of the cheddar for garnish). Add the milk and salt and pepper and stir until well combined.

6. Place a tortilla in the prepared springform pan. Spread with one quarter of the vegetable-chickpea mixture. Sprinkle with one quarter of the cheese mixture. Repeat the layers 3 times. Top with the final tortilla and sprinkle with the remaining cheddar cheese and the Parmesan cheese. Cover the pan tightly with foil.

7. Bake for 20 minutes in the preheated oven, then uncovered for 10 minutes or until it is completely heated through and the cheese has melted. Cut into 8 wedges with a sharp knife.

ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS) BY ROSE REISMAN

Your guide to oyster-friendly wine

LIQUID ASSETS

When you grow up in Nova Scotia, you quickly come to realize that a few things are pretty much a given. 1) You must own Anne Murray's Greatest Hits. 2) Even on a bad day, you have to be friendly to tourists. 3) You're born with a love of fresh seafood.

As a bluenoser, I was brought up on more than just lobster. Scallops and mussels were a menu regular at my house. Sadly, the one mollusk that eluded me as a kid was oyster.

Now that I can eat what I want, I like nothing better than to shuck my way through a dozen or so of our country's amazing oyster output over a glass of one of the many wines that pair so well with them.

If you're up for the classics, a dry French Chablis, Muscadet or anything with champagne in its name is a marriage made in heaven.

A modern take on the perfect pairing is any vino made from sauvignon blanc. New Zealand makes rock solid versions with the Whitehaven 2010 Marlborough Sauvignon Blanc ($17.99 - $19.99), a citrus-infused wonder that plays so well with oysters when both meet in your mouth.

Throw a dinner like Padma Lakshmi

Party planning. The Top Chef host, cookbook author, model and actress takes the stress out of impressing guests

MEREDITH ENGEL
Metro World News in New York City

Make your shopping trips easier
Maybe you need some weird spice or some specialty ingredient ... You can always call ahead," Lakshmi advises. "Call the spice shop and say, 'Hi, I'm coming down to pick up yuzu, do you have it in stock? Can you save a bottle by the register? I'll be there in half an hour.' That way, you know it's waiting for you. Even give them a credit card, have them run it. You pick it up, you sign the bill, you're home that much faster.

Design the menu around your guests
If you have a guest list of people you know well and you know that a certain person likes a certain dish, it is nice to make it for them because it shows you're thinking about them and what pleases them. The No. 1 thing that a good host or hostess should remember is that hosting a party is about making others feel welcome. It's about making other people feel loved and thought about and making other people have a good time.

Prep early so you can enjoy yourself
The No. 1 key to having a good party — whether it's a cocktail party or a barbecue or a formal dinner party — is when the host is relaxed. The way to ensure that is preparation. Don't wait until the last minute to go shopping or plan your menu. Try to plan a menu that has at least half or two-thirds of the items on it that can be made ahead ... You want to make things that are easy on you. Nobody comes to a party for the food. They actually really come to the party for the people.

A relaxed host is one of the keys to a successful dinner party. GETTY IMAGES

Serve a buffet
If it's a dinner party for more than six or eight people, I always do it buffet. It allows your guests to mingle with other people rather than just the person to their left and right, and it allows you to have more guests rolling in and out.

Choose the right music
Music is important in the beginning, especially when the first guests are arriving — so there's not crickets or silence. If you're planning a soundtrack, you should plan it for the whole evening: maybe cocktail-y music at the start. During dinner, I like jazz or classical, mostly instrumental, because I'm interested in the conversation.

Your party timeline

Make your list and check it twice.

- Three weeks before: Send invitations. "I think you want to give people time to make room in their schedule for the party ... whether (your invite is) just an e-mail or a phone call saying, 'Hey, I want to have you over for dinner, how does three Thursdays from now look?'"
- Within a week of the party: Get a guest head count. "If I'm planning a dinner party for six, that's different than a cocktail party for 60 or a buffet for 36."
- Three or four days before: Start stocking up. "There's some things, like flowers and fruit, that you want to buy three or four days in advance so they have a chance to bloom, to ripen ... Talk to your florist, say, 'What days do the flowers come in?' They'll tell you."
- The day of: Buy any last-minute items and prepare what you can in advance. "Fish you always want to buy the day of, you want it to be fresh ... Make a salad, make a quiche, warm the quiche up in the oven. Make a roast that you can turn the oven off at 3 p.m. and it just stays warm and you can slice it tableside."

Just Opened: Sansotei Ramen

Downtown's got a brand new ramen joint. Continuing the city's trend of Japanese cuisine, Sansotei Ramen recently opened up at 179 Dundas St. W. Its industrial design — light woods, greyed walls, sea rope hanging from the ceiling — is a beautiful contrast to the vibrancy of the ramen dishes being served, like slow-cooked pork belly with hard-boiled egg, or miso or shio varieties.

Just Opened: I Went to Philly

It's nice to see family businesses can still make a mark. Such is the case with I Went to Philly, a new Philly cheese steak joint that recently opened up at 462 Yonge St. After going, not surprisingly, to Philly last year, the family decided to bring back the traditional delicious sammies to downtown. Try the Original for a classic taste, or go all out with The Works. And order some Cheese Steak Fries on the side.

Just Opened: The Detox Market

Here through January, The Detox Market recently popped up at 367 King St. W. What's inside? Everything from Russian tea to soaps and perfumes from France, hair care with Amazonian extracts and vegan oat shakes from Scandinavia. This L.A. transplant will have you primped, polished, and pleased with eco-conscious and body, mind, and soul-satisfying products. But hurry in, it's only here for four months.

Steam Whistle UNSIGNED

Steam Whistle Brewery's indie music series, UNSIGNED, is back tonight, and takes over the brewery for an evening of bodacious beats. UNSIGNED #23 is tonight at Steam Whistle's Toronto headquarters (255 Bremner Blvd.), and features Odonis Odonis, Indian Handcrafts, and Young Mother playing the mini concert. Bonus, there's plenty of Steam Whistle to go 'round. Doors open tonight at 8 p.m.

Grand Opening: PLAY on Queen

Are you ready to PLAY? This new nightlife experience is holding its grand opening tonight, and you'll find it at 1032 Queen St. W. Dress to impress at this new club, which features mash-ups of favourite music styles spun by DJ Rouge and a high-energy, young and hip crowd all ready to party through to the wee hours of Saturday morning.

Chilean Wine Festival

On Oct. 2 in the Peter F. Bronfman Hall at the ROM, you'll discover some amazing wines from Chile at the eighth Annual Chilean Wine Festival. This grand tasting of all things Chilean wine will feature an outstanding set of 30 wineries and over 150 wines to sip and sample. Paired with some tasty catered fare and a casual yet chic atmosphere, this is one wine tasting you won't want to miss.

European exodus not all rosy, IIHF head says

NHL lockout. 'Integrity of game' should come before short-term business gains: Fasel

The steady flow of star players to European teams during the NHL lockout could distort national competitions, International Ice Hockey Federation president Rene Fasel said Thursday.

Fasel told The Associated Press that he balanced the increased attention for European hockey against potential damage to the integrity of leagues, especially if players return to North America midseason.

"It's questionable how fair it is to the others (teams) and the whole league system," Fasel said by telephone from Tokyo, where the governing body has its congress next week.

"The integrity of the game is, for us, something very important. It's not just business," the world hockey leader said. "We play the game for the hockey fans, but sport should always be No. 1. Sport should also be about fairness to everybody."

Since the lockout started, players have turned to Europe to find playing time and salaries until the stalemate between the league and NHL players' union is resolved.

Fasel said it is good for fans to see stars come home, including two-time MVP Alex Ovechkin to Russian club Dynamo Moscow and New York Islanders captain Mark Streit with Switzerland's best-supported club, Bern.

"That is very positive, there's no doubt," said Fasel, a former Swiss league referee. "Mark Streit never played in Switzerland when he was a junior. Now he can come back and play for a top team as a big star — that's a great story."

Still, Fasel acknowledged mixed feelings.

"You have to pay the insurance (for salaries) and we know most of the clubs have troubles with their budgets, so they should be careful," he said. "There are some teams in Switzerland that will never be able to pay half a million and more to hire these guys."

Seguin goes Swiss

Boston Bruins centre Tyler Seguin is set to sign with Swiss team EHC Biel for the duration of the lockout.

- The team said on its website that Seguin is expected to join the Swiss A League club Saturday and could be eligible to play next week.
- "Looks like I'm wearing number 9 for EHC Biel in Switzerland till the lockouts done. Excited to play next week. #illmissthebruinsfans," Seguin posted on his Twitter account.

'I'm playing:' Jets' Revis ready to go

Darrelle Revis is back in action for the New York Jets.

The All-Pro cornerback was cleared Thursday for contact in practice for the first time since suffering a concussion in the team's season opener. And, as far as Revis is concerned, there's no doubt he'll be on the field against the Dolphins in Miami.

"I'm playing," Revis said after practice. "The doctors cleared me, so I'll be playing Sunday."

A's show blowout power in winning finale in Detroit

Seth Smith homered, doubled and drove in four runs, and the Oakland Athletics avoided a three-game sweep by beating the Detroit Tigers 12-4 Thursday in a matchup of AL playoff contenders.

Both teams began the day in second place in their divisions, and Oakland held an edge in the wild-card race. The Tigers fell 2 1/2 games behind the Central-leading Chicago White Sox, who played later at Kansas City.

Outscored 18-4 in the first two games, Oakland held down Miguel Cabrera to win the finale. Cabrera singled in four at-bats, and tops the AL in batting at .333. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jones back in comfort zone ahead of UFC 152

MMA. Opponent Belfort says he looks forward to challenge of fighting the young champ in a heavier weight class

Despite a bumpy road of late, UFC light-heavyweight champion Jon 'Bones' Jones says he is back in his comfort zone ahead of his UFC 152 title defence Saturday against Vitor 'The Phenom' Belfort.

"I'm home," the 25-year-old Jones told reporters after an open workout Wednesday at the Xtreme Couture gym in Toronto. "MMA, it's my livelihood, it's my sanctuary.

"And even though this gym isn't my gym, I feel as if I'm in a sanctuary. Fighting and moving my body and breaking a sweat, that's what makes me feel alive. I'm just grateful to be here. I'm grateful that there's people here that care and I'm going to entertain them."

He will do so against a beefed-up Belfort, who volunteered to move up a weight class for the fight at Air Canada Centre and take on Jones (16-1) when other light-heavyweights backed off.

Belfort will be giving up 10 years and four inches in height to the six-foot-four Jones.

"I love challenges," the Brazilian said cheerfully. "I've been part of this sport for 17 years. I came from the era of Dan Severn, Mark Coleman. It's a joy, it's just a blessing to still be around."

Jones, the son of a New York state pastor acknowledged that he is the first to admit he does not have all the answers.

"Let alone figuring out what life is like being a champion, figuring out what life is like being a 25-year-old father growing up under a microscope, it's tough man, it really is," he said.

"I'm just extremely grateful to be where I'm at and I'm going to continue to try to do my best and I hope that the fans bear with me because it's not always going to be perfect."

Jones' troubles

Jon Jones' popularity took a blow when he decided not to fight Chael Sonnen on short notice at UFC 151, a move that led the UFC to cancel the Sept. 1 Las Vegas card.

- "I definitely really feel horrible about the way it all played out," said Jones, while adding he was not the one that cancelled the show. "I believe a good performance (Saturday) will definitely help people forget."

Middleweight. 'He knows he can't win': Bisping stirs the pot with Stann

English middleweight Michael 'The Count' Bisping stole the show at the UFC 152 news conference Thursday, jamming his face into opponent Brian 'All American' Stann as the two posed for photos.

Bisping and Stann stood nose-to-nose, then the Brit leaned forward and edged his forehead into the American's face. Stann moved back a step and then stood his ground, their eyes locked.

When they broke the pose, Stann paused before being the first to put out his hand and they shook.

But the former marine war hero did not remain with Bisping for a secondary pose for photos. Instead, clearly not happy, Stann glared at the English fighter from the side of the stage while a smirking Bisping took centre stage alone to adopt a fighting stance.

Bisping added some trash talk later in the day.

"He put his nose against mine and it was like an Eskimo kiss, so I pressed my forehead again his," Bisping said. "I saw all the macho-ness drain out of him like someone had pulled a plug in a bath. He looked like a little girl who had got separated from her parents at Disneyland and has wet herself, and was all alone and scared.

"He knows he can't win this fight. He probably called home right away and said 'Honey, I'm not getting a win bonus. Hold off on ordering that new kitchen.'" THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hollett looking to make his mark

Roger Hollett
CONTRIBUTED

Roger Hollett has worked for eight years to get an opportunity at the highest level of mixed martial arts — and he hopes it's over in an instant.

The Fairview, N.S., native, who started his MMA career in Halifax in 2004, is now 33 years old and about to make his long-awaited UFC debut. He'll face Matt Hamill in a light heavyweight bout on the undercard of UFC 152 at Air Canada Centre in Toronto on Saturday, and savouring the moment isn't on his agenda.

"I'm trying to get that knockout bonus," said Hollett, who has ended 10 of his 13 victories in the first round, four via knockout. "I'm going to be going in there with nothing to lose."

Argos' Owens proves MVP race isn't over

All-around performer. Receiver is on pace to shatter 15-year-old combined-yards record set by Pinball Clemons

Quoted

"It's a credit to everybody across the board. The O-line, the rest of the receivers and, obviously, Ricky Ray."

Argos receiver Chad Owens
explaining that his outstanding statistics this year are the result of a group effort.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats receiver/returner Chris Williams remains the odds-on favourite to be the CFL's MVP, but Argos Chad Owens could literally give him a run for the title before the 2012 season ends.

Heading into Sunday's game in Montreal, Owens needs just 62 yards to reach 1,000 yards receiving. The league's No. 2 pass catcher could also become the first player in professional football to have three consecutive all-purpose 3,000-yard seasons.

He needs just 305 yards. It's certainly possible considering how the Flyin' Hawaiian set a franchise record 402 combined yards in Toronto's 33-30 win over the Tiger-Cats on Labour Day.

But Owens isn't taking anything for granted, especially seeing how fast a season-ending injury can happen such as what sent Montreal tailback Brandon Whitaker to the sidelines with a torn ACL.

"The only thing you're guaranteed in this game is the play you're in," Owens said on Wednesday as the Argos returned for the first full day of practice since their 28-23 loss to the B.C. Lions last Saturday. "Look at Whitaker. He's a good friend of mine. He was having a hell of a season, and now it's over.

"I tore my ACL in 2008 so I know what it's like. I was blessed and fortunate to be able to come back. I told myself that if I ever did come back then I would give it my all on every play as if it was going to be the last play of my career. You just never know what can happen."

Pound for pound, the 5-foot-8, 180-pound Owens is one of the toughest players in the league. After every catch he gets hit with punishment, but it hasn't prevented him from catching 67 passes for 938 yards and five TDs. He's just 15 yards behind league leader, S.J. Green of the Alouettes, who has only three majors.

Had it not been for a couple of dropped end-zone passes and pass-interference calls, Owens could be leading the league in touchdowns with at least eight scores.

Owens went into the season with the goal of becoming a big-time pass catcher and returner. Achieving a 1,000-yard season, the first Toronto player to do so since Arland Bruce in 2008, was also high on his list of personal achievements.

"It's an individual goal that I shot for before the season began. But it really shows what we've been able to do offensively this season as a team," Owens said. "It's a credit to everybody across the board. The O-line, the rest of the receivers and, obviously, Ricky Ray.

"But the bottom line is if I end up with 20 yards receiving against Montreal and we come out with the win, that's all I care about. I mean, do I want to have just 20 yards receiving? No. That's just being real. But getting a win in this big game is everything."

Owens is also on pace to also shatter Michael "Pinball" Clemons' 1997 record for combined yards of 3,840 yards. With seven games to go, Owens has 2,695 yards, averaging 245 per game. He needs just 1,146 yards, 164 per game, to eclipse Clemons.

Owens has a knack of coming up with big games against the Alouettes, a team for whom he was on the practice roster in 2009 before his trade to the Argos in June, 2010.

Earlier this season, Owens was a one-man offensive star in the first half of Toronto's 23-20 win over Montreal. Owens caught two scoring passes, something he hadn't done since August 2010, also against the Als.

"Some teams you just match up well against," Owens said.

He expects to get double teamed on Sunday but he's not concerned.

"That means somebody else will be open," Owens said. "We've got a lot of different playmakers across the board." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

All eyes will be on Lions' Mitchell

CFL EXTRA POINTS
Dan Toth
toronto@metronews.ca

B.C. Lions: If you believe in karma, you're expecting Khalif Mitchell to trip while stepping off the Lions team bus in Edmonton this weekend, breaking his arm in the process. Sadly, what goes around doesn't always come around in pro sports, and Mitchell is sounding anything but contrite as he gets ready to face Simeon Rottier and the Edmonton Eskimos on Saturday. It's a rematch of a July contest at BC Place Stadium, at which Mitchell purposely wrenched Rottier's arm into a mangled mess and received a two-game suspension.

Toronto Argos: The most penalized team in the CFL held a players-only meeting to discuss the problem this week and to devise a form of punishment, but that might be a losing approach. Lots of teams impose fines to limit stupid penalties, but it rarely works because players need to muster the maturity from within to avoid penalties. Through 11 regular-season games, Toronto is the CFL's most penalized team (124 for 1,147 yards).

Hamilton Tiger-Cats: Hamilton fans have to be hoping that last week's 43-point win over Edmonton was a glimpse of the real Tiger-Cats team. It was a dominant performance from Henry Burris and the offence, while Casey Creehan's defence completely shut down Edmonton's consistently weak offence. And the Tabbies couldn't wish for a better matchup this week as they travel to Winnipeg.

Edmonton Eskimos: You have to think the Eskimos offence is taking sides in the locker-room as Kavis Reed spins the wheel of fortune to choose his starting quarterback. Reed has announced that former No. 1 pivot Steven Jyles is back in the hotseat after temporarily losing his job to backup Kerry Joseph. Injuries have also played a role, but the players need to know who's in charge of the offence.

Lions defensive lineman Khalif Mitchell travels to Edmonton on Saturday for the first time since intentionally hyper-extending Eskimos' offensive lineman Simeon Rottier's arm in July. DARRYL DYCK/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Calgary Stampeders: Jon Cornish has to be the Stamps nominee for Most Outstanding Player this season, with 880 yards rushing and a chance to be the first Canadian back to claim the rushing title since Orville Lee more than two decades ago. That said, backup quarterback Kevin Glenn deserves some consideration too. Imagine where the 7-4 Stamps would be today if they had a backup the likes of Edmonton or Winnipeg. Glenn has been steady and at times sensational since replacing the injured Drew Tate in Game 2 back in early July.

Saskatchewan Roughriders: Riders coach Corey Chamblin created a stir this week by indicating someone would lose his job if Stamps back Cornish posts a 100-yard game against the Riders when the teams meet Sunday in Regina. Cornish rumbled for 159 yards in a 17-10 win over the Riders a couple of weeks ago, and while stopping the run might save everyone's job, it will open up opportunities for Calgary's many other offensive weapons.

Spiritual

IN THE LIGHT OF TRUTH
THE GRAIL MESSAGE
"...I wish to fill the gaps which have so far always remained unanswered in the souls of men as burning questions, and which never leave any serious thinker in peace, if he honestly seeks for the Truth."
ABD-RU-SHIN

The Grail Message deals clearly and objectively with important questions which move any serious seeker for the Truth:

- The Purpose of Life on Earth
- Woman and her Vocation
- Life after Death
- Reincarnation
- World Judgment and End Time
- Fate and Destiny
- ....and many more

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may come under a lot of pressure today but you have always been the sort who knows how to raise your game when the heat is on, so you'll do OK. But try not to put any friendships at risk.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The only way you are going to get things done, and get them done right, over the next 24 hours is if you do them yourself. Fortunately, with your ruler Venus on good terms with Jupiter, you won't lack enthusiasm.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may be entirely in the right but be wary of starting a feud with someone who may, in the long-term, prove stronger and more ruthless than you. Maybe this time it would be wise to back down.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You seemed determined to put yourself to the test, to prove that you have what it takes. But who are you trying to impress: yourself or other people? If it's the latter, you need to change your outlook a little.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Because you are trying to do several tasks at once, things have begun to go wrong. But, being the stubborn sort, you refuse to change. Do you really want to end up further away from your goals than when you started?

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your eagerness to succeed could lead you to show your hand too soon and make it easy for rivals to work out what you are trying to do. Don't tell anyone, not even friends, what they don't need to know.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Avoid petty disputes today. With your ruling planet Venus on good terms with big-hearted Jupiter, the last thing you want is to get caught up in other people's squabbles. Your sights are set on bigger and better things.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You will go over the top in some way today but somehow it will all come right for you — which may be a huge surprise. Both financially and professionally, it seems you can do no wrong at the moment.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Just because other people are going to extremes does not mean you have to do the same. In fact ,the planets warn that if you go too far today, in any direction, you will regret it over the weekend. Play it safe.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You don't have to be assertive, or even aggressive, to get what you desire. Venus and Jupiter come together in such a way that you can quite easily persuade others to give it to you. Don't abuse the situation though.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Something unexpected will happen over the next 24 hours and it will be the kind of something you enjoy. Most likely a relationship will move to a higher level. Suddenly you are on the same wavelength.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
With Jupiter, planet of excess, strong in your chart there is a possibility that you will take the kind of risk that is best avoided. On the other hand, if you don't take a risk how will you progress? It's your choice.
